'Works' Passes, 328 to 78; House Bars Revisions

Message From Roosevelt Answers Protests of Opponents.

Dixie Insurgents Lose Fight on Gag

Senate Will Consider $4,800,000,000 Plan More Leisurely.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

All Republican amendments were squelched as the Democratic leadership came into its own yesterday and drove the $4,880,000,000 works bill through the House by a vote of 328 to 78.

The measure, pushed through the lower chamber under a modified gag rule, now goes to the Senate, where it will be considered in less hurried fashion. Senator Robinson, Arkansas, the majority leader, announced he would countenance no effort to prevent offering of amendments.

President Roosevelt took cognizance of a sharp-shooting coalition of rebellious Democrats and Republicans by sending a message to Congress before the House voted on his program to put 3,500,000 people to work. He met several protests raised by the opposition.

Tripronged Agency.

Meanwhile, the Associated Press, in a copyrighted article, said a tripronged agency would be set up to administer the works funds when the "dole" ceases. Mr. Roosevelt will supervise personally all three agencies.

Ten Democrats, half of them from Georgia, voted against the bill as the House disposed of the largest single appropriation measure since World War days. The Southerners sided against their party as an aftermath of the unsuccessful efforts of Representative Cox, Georgia, to prevent the House Rules Committee from restricting debate.

Twenty-six Republicans, six Progressives and two Farmer-Laborites voted "aye" on final passage.

An aroused minority was overwhelmed repeatedly in the nerve-wracking eight-hour session. The most telling blow to the G. O. P. and Democratic insurgents was dealt when the House voted down, by 303 to 100, a motion to recommit.

Substitute Bill Avoided.

Had that maneuver, championed by Minority Leader Snell, succeeded, the Appropriations Committee would have been directed to report back immediately virtually a substitute bill. The changed measure would have retained the lump sum figure proposed by the New Deal. There the parallel would have stopped.

Salient points of the Republican proposal were:

Federal competition with private

Paris May Aid Italy on Gold

Laval Pledged Loan to Save Stabilization, London Hears.

London, Jan. 24 (AP).—Diplomatic sources said today Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France had pledged his nation to lend a substantial sum to Italy to prevent the collapse of the gold bloc.

The secret pledge, it was said, was made during Laval's recent conversations with Premier Mussolini.

It was recalled that Italy's gold coverage of her currency reached a dangerously low level shortly before the Rome conversations and that Mussolini took drastic measures to protect the lira.

The official communiques on the conversations contained no record of financial matters. An American official revealed that reports of the pledge had been heard. This was regarded as highly important if true, because of the uncertainty of the dollar's future position in relation to the gold bloc currencies. The gold nations include France, Italy, Belgium and Holland.

Sources professing to know of the loan promised also said Clement Moret, former director of the Bank of France, was forced out because he refused to approve the loan.

This interpretation of the bank shake-up is directly contrary to that given by British financial experts recently. The latter predicted Moret's resignation might portend devaluation of the franc, whereas, according to the new information, it resulted in a tightening of the gold bloc's battle lines.

In this connection France has just announced a credit expansion policy. Mussolini has not shown any desire in the past to float loans, which was interpreted as a fear devaluation might be necessary, and he did not want to be loaded with increased interest charges.

Bardo Clings To Immunity In Arms Probe

Ex-Shipping Head Will Be Questioned Today at Senate Inquiry.

(Associated Press.)

Undeterred by the refusal of Clinton L. Bardo, white-haired former president of the New York Shipbuilding Co., to waive immunity, the Senate Munitions Committee last night made plans to interrogate him in a day-long session today.

Bardo yesterday used the term "inquisition" in connection with the investigation and firmly refused to waive his constitutional rights of declining to answer questions which later might be used against him in event of prosecution.

He coupled this refusal with an emphatic and reiterated assertion that no collusion existed between his company and others for fixing the price of cruiser jobs between 1926 and 1931.

After questioning Bardo today and recessing over the week-end, committee members said they planned to make a journey to Collingswood, N. J., there to question Ernest I. Cornbrook, former plant manager of the New York company. Cornbrook is ill in a hospital there.

"A very important story" was the fashion in which Stephen Raushen-

6 Overcome by Fire In Hudson Tube Train

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Six persons, two of them women, who required hospital treatment, were overcome by smoke in a fire which developed after a Hudson & Manhattan Railway train, with 50 passengers aboard, was stalled by a short circuit underneath the Hudson River midway between New York and Jersey City today.

The motorman of the train ran to the rear cab and brought the three-car train back to the Cortlandt Street Terminal, where those overcome were attended.

Ickes Rules U. S. Owner Of Elk Hills

Reverses Fall's Order in Reopening Oil Land Dispute.

Government Entitled to Pay for Output, Secretary Holds.

The long dormant controversy over ownership of the Elk Hills oil lands in California, a controversy that played a large part in the Teapot Dome scandals, was reopened yesterday by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, when he reversed a 14-year-old decision by the late Secretary Albert B. Fall and declared the Government owns the disputed property.

The decision held that the Government not only owns the property, but that it is entitled to compensation for all the oil and gas taken out by private interests since 1903. The decision was rendered under mandate of a Senate resolution adopted at the instigation of the late Senator Walsh of Montana in 1924.

The voluminous report, which echoed Teapot Dome in every page, was made public by Ickes at his press conference. When newspaper men assembled he ordered the doors to his office locked to prevent premature release. While reporters sat in wonderment the document was distributed.

Moves to Recover Land.

The Ickes decision, unless overruled by the courts, means that after years of dispute the valuable oil lands must be returned to the Government. The section involved contains 36 oil wells and 4 gas wells. It is estimated that private interests have taken from the land a total of 5,500,000 barrels of oil and 57,000,000,000 cubic feet of gas, estimated to have been worth over the period during which it was taken a total of $5,835,000. The Government will seek to recover this amount.

Holders of the land are the Standard Oil Co. of California, Mrs. Sydney H. Greeley, Frank J. Carman, Charles O. Fairbank, Edward L. Doheny, Thomas A. O'Donnell, the Pan-American Petroleum C., a Doheny concern; the Valley Natural Gas Co., and the Associated Gas Co. It is estimated that there still are 22,000,000 barrels of recoverable oil in the land.

Obtain Title From State.

The private holders of the land obtained title from the State of California in 1903. During the Teapot Dome investigation it was contended that California never had title to the land on the ground that the Government controlled all land containing known valuable mineral deposits. After an inquiry Secretary Fall held that the United States had no claim to the property. Later, as a result of the Teapot Dome investigation, Fall served a prison term for bribery.

Senator Walsh succeeded in having the case reopened. In 1925 the Standard Oil Co. filed suit in the District of Columbia courts to enjoin reopening of the inquiry. The courts here sustained the company, but the case was reversed by the Supreme Court, which held that Fall had not considered all the facts. Two years ago the case had reached C. C. Moore, land commissioner. Moore sustained the Fall decision. Later, Moore resigned at the request of Ickes, who then took the case in hand and reversed all previous decisions.

During the Teapot Dome investigation it was contended that Elk Hills was rightly a Navy reserve field and that private interests had no right to take gas and oil from the land. Ickes indicated in making his decision public that he hoped for an amicable settlement, but added the private interests still had recourse to the courts.

Suffering from the most intense cold of the winter, Washington started to dig itself out from huge ice-covered drifts yesterday as a minimum temperature of 6 degrees at 7:30 a. m. numbed its ears and winter roared its destructive way across the continent.

While 6,500 men pushed shovels throughout the Capital, clearing streets of the 11-inch snowfall, the Associated Press reported more than 170 persons dead in traffic mishaps, floods, fires and sub-zero weather throughout the Nation.

The Weather Bureau predicted today, in Washington, would be fair with slowly rising temperatures, reaching the high twenties in the afternoon.

Mississippi Flood.

In Tennessee and north Mississippi, 3,000 still were marooned by the raging Coldwater River. Fourteen were known dead and many others were feared lost.

Meanwhile, on opposite shores of the continent, New England and British Columbia dug their way out of snow that had isolated cities and towns, wrecked communication lines and blocked roads.

The hard-hit Eastern Shore of Maryland still was more or less isolated from the outside world, but telephone workers struggled throughout the day, and last night were successfully reestablishing communications.

Thousands of office employes, Government workers and school children were late yesterday morning as traffic crawled cautiously along the glazed streets, drivers shielding their eyes from the blinding glare thrown back as the bright sun shone on the snow.

For the most part, however, business as usual was the order in the Capital. Street car service returned to normal, although transportation on most lines was slow.

Three Traffic Accidents.

Only one serious traffic mishap was reported to police yesterday. Lewis Johnson, 36, colored, of the 200 block of Seaton court northwest, was struck by the truck of a hit-run driver at First and Pierce streets. He was taken to Emergency Hospital suffering from fractures of the collar bone, pelvis, hip and several ribs. Slight hope was held for his recovery.

Judge Holds Fixed Price Illegal in Coal Code

St. Louis, Jan. 24 (AP).—Federal Judge C. B. Davis held today that price fixing is a "monopolistic practice" and denied the Government an injunction to prevent the Coal Service Co. from selling below minimum retail prices fixed by the Coal Code Authority.

The Coal Service Co., although operating under the NRA, has ignored the minimum price schedules since they were published last November.

Hunterdon County Courthouse, Flemington, N. J., Jan. 24.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann took seven long, eager strides to the witness chair today and began to din his "No" into the ears of the world.

Hauptmann came to this hour on which his own salvation hangs like a man who has all the woe of the world lifted from his heart. He smiled while he stood there with his left hand on a Gideon Bible and his right hand aloft. Everything about him was gray—his suit, his blue-gray shirt and the prison pallor that was heavy on his face.

Another lean man dressed in gray leaned forward in his chair and stared into the prisoner's eyes. It also was an important moment for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

"I do."

Preliminary Questions.

Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel, started through the routine of preliminary questions.

"Where were you born?"

"How old are you?"

Hauptmann's replies came in brief sentences. His voice fell harshly on the courtroom. But all this was only preliminary. Everybody knew something was about to happen when a man and a woman pushed through the crowd. Reilly waved for Hauptmann to step down from the witness chair. Deputy Sheriff Hovey Low, who stands guard at the witness stand while Hauptmann testifies, moved over and took charge of the prisoner.

"Christian Frederickson," shouted Reilly.

The roly-poly little man who had come out of the crowd was sworn in. His wife went back among the spectators.

Thrust at State's Case.

Reilly was about to get home a deadly thrust against the State's case at the outset. People began to recall what Lloyd Fisher, another defense counsel, had said a half hour before when he delivered his opening statement and shouted hoarsely through the room that Hauptmann was innocent because:

"We will prove that he took his wife home from the bakery where she worked on the night the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped.

"We will prove that Hauptmann was attending a party in his own home the night the ransom was paid in St. Raymond's Cemetery.

"We will prove that Hauptmann was in his own home the night that he is supposed to have offered a $5 ransom bill in payment for a theater ticket.

"There are three important dates, and there are our three alibis."

Reilly realized that this little baker sitting in the chair could speak words that might save a life. He handled him cautiously.

"You were at work on the night of March 1, 1932, Mr. Frederickson?"

"Yes."

"Anna Hauptmann worked in your bakery on that date?"

"Yes."

"Do you remember that her husband called for her at the bakery on that night?"

Witness Hesitates.

The silence was heavy. Little Mr. Frederickson decided to take his time over that question. A frown of concentration creased his forehead. Hauptmann seemed to have stopped breathing and his face was pale and frozen.

Then came Frederickson's answer:

"It might be, but I can't swear to it."

It was a shaky piece of testimony for a man whose life hangs on what people say who sit in the oaken chair beside the judge's bench. A firm, clear-cut statement from Frederickson that Hauptmann was

Japan's Planes Bomb Chahar; 50 Battle Toll

(Copyright, 1935, by The Associated Press.)

Peiping, Jan. 24.—Japanese bombing planes, raining death, roared out again today over the Mongolian plains that echoed 70 years ago to the hoofs of Genghis Khan's horsemen, reports reaching Peiping said.

With 50 or more killed and wounded in the three days of Sino-Japanese fighting along the Jehol-Chahar border, some 90 miles north of Peiping, the Japanese military attache's office in Peiping asserted "No further action is likely."

A Japanese infantry advance into the Chinese Province of Chahar, lying adjacent to the southwestern portions of the Japanese-created empire of Manchukuo, apparently had been halted by the Japanese themselves.

The Rengo (Japanese) News Agency, however, reported from Hsinking, capital of Manchukuo,

Hauptmann's Own Testimony

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 24 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann took the stand as the first defense witness after the State had rested its murder case against him today.

Hauptmann walked quietly to the front of the jury box and took the oath. Hovey Low, deputy who sat with him, walked beside him and took a position behind the witness stand. This, Attorney General David T. Wilentz said, was by consent of both sides.

He clenched his hands as he sat down in the witness chair. The whole court craned forward to hear.

Q. You are the defendant in this action?—A. I am.

Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel, was questioning the defendant. Hauptmann spoke in a guttural voice with a marked accent.

Q. When were you born?—A. November 6, 1899.

Q. Did you attend school?—A. Yes, eight years.

Q. When did you first work?—A. In mine home town as a carpenter.

Q. Were you wounded in the war?—A. Slightly wounded, yes, and gassed.

Q. In the public schools did you learn to write German script?—A. Yes.

Q. You went to trade school?—A. Yes.

Q. What trade?—A. Carpenter's trade.

Hauptmann's answers were in a thin, steady voice. He leaned forward, resting elbows on the chair arms and watched his questioner.

Q. When did you come out of the army?—A. About Christmas time.

Q. About a month after the Armistice?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you able to get any work?—A. No.

Q. Germany was in a very poor condition?—A. Yes.

Q. During 1919, you were convicted of some offense?—A. Yes. The springtime of 1919.

Q. As a result did you serve a sentence?—A. Yes.

Q. Afterward were you paroled?—A. Yes.

Q. When was it, about March 6, 1923?—A. Yes, about then.

Reilly then led the ashen-faced former convict through the story of his first unsuccessful attempt to smuggle his way into the United States. Then the second unsuccessful effort.

Q. When was the third time?—A. November, 1923.

Q. When did you obtain employment?—A. About a week after I landed—as a dishwasher.

Q. How long?—A. About a month and a half.

Q. How much were you paid a week?—A. Sixteen dollars.

Describes His Successive Positions.

Hauptmann related successive positions he held after entering the country and details connected with them.

Q. And each time you tried to improve your position?—A. I did.

The German, in broken English, told of taking lodging at Ninety-sixth street.

Q. In Yorkville?—A. No, it is on the west side of New York.

Q. And then did you finally obtain a position as a carpenter?—A. Yes.

Q. How much were you getting, a dollar an hour?—A. Yes.

Q. How much would that be a day—A. $8 a day.

Q. When did you first meet the lady who afterward became your wife?—A. In 1924.

Q. Her maiden name was what?—A. Anna Schoeffler.

Q. Who did she work for?—A. Mr. and Mrs. Rosenbaum.

Q. Did you finally live in some house in Eighty-eighth street—that is, Yorkville?—A. Yes.

Hauptmann then related how he and one Albert Diedig were together when they smuggled their way into the United States.

Reilly traced the changes of abode in the Yorkville section Hauptmann made with Diedig.

Q. Did you get a position in Lakewood as a carpenter?—A. I got this position from the newspapers.

Q. Did that position end on Christmas, 1924?—A. Christmas, 1924.

Q. How much were you paid on that job?—A. Fifty dollars.

Mrs. Hauptmann did not look at the witness. Her face was a mask, her eyes blank and expressionless, but she was very rigid in her chair.

Q. When did you and Anna Schoeffler marry?—A. The tenth of October of 1925.

Ickes Apologizes for Attack To Fellow Cabinet Officers

Senator, Aroused by Virgin Islands Article, Protests 'Interference' to White House; 'I'm Not Loved,' Says Secretary.

By Felix Bruner.

Secretary Ickes apologized yesterday to Attorney General Cummings, Postmaster General Farley and Senator Pat Harrison for the action of the Interior Department in distributing to the press reprints of an article from the Nation attacking them.

Ickes declared that he had not authorized distribution of the article and that he had sent a letter to each of the three men expressing his regret that it had been sent out. The article condemned Judge T. Webber Wilson, of the Virgin Islands, for his conviction of a public works clerk for appropriating $48 of Government property. It added that Cummings, Farley and Harrison had been responsible for the judge's appointment, declaring it had been made purely on political grounds.

In spite of Ickes' disclaimer of responsibility, Senator Harrison called at the White House and complained directly to President Roosevelt for what he termed interference by a Cabinet officer with the judiciary.

"It looks like men appointed to the judiciary could be let alone and not interfered with by executive officers," Harrison said. He declared that Judge Wilson had proved himself to be "a great representative of the people." He said Wilson does not believe in "subserviency to some Governor." Gov. Pearson of the Virgin Islands was appointed by President Hoover and, it is understood, is being kept there at the insistence of Ickes.

"I did not authorize distribution of that article," Ickes said. "I would not authorize it. I didn't know it had been given out until I received a telephone call in New York telling me about it."

Ickes said the article had been intended for distribution only in the department and had been released through a misunderstanding.

"I am very sorry it happened."

Ward Liner Sends Out S O S After Crash Off Jersey Coast

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Lifeboats launched from the side of the disabled steamship Mohawk, of the Ward Line, wireless messages said, following a collision with the seagoing tug Talisman 4 miles off Sea Girt, N. J.

At 9:50 p. m. the Mohawk, in a message to the United Fruit liner Lemon, reported she was "heading for the beach with a bad list."

Shortly thereafter she messaged the Talisman, which was standing by, "Beaching some boats. Pick them up."

To the Lemon went the message, "If you can pick up our boats, do so."

Both S O S signals were timed "at about" 9:30 p. m. (E. S. T.).

The Mohawk, bound for Vera Cruz, carried a crew of 107.

At 9:45, a few minutes after the S O S, the Talisman asked the Mohawk if she required assistance and received the reply from the liner to stand by for further orders from the captain.

"I think the captain will try to beach the boat at Sea Girt," the Mohawk's wireless operator added.

Asbury Park, N. J., Jan. 24 (AP). The Coast Guard tonight put two life boats to sea after receiving reports that the S. S. Mohawk of the Ward Line had been in collision with the seagoing tug Talisman 4 miles off Sea Girt.

Commander Sands in charge of the New Jersey Coast Guard, said he believed the vessels reported in collision were about 5 or 6 miles off shore, in the ship lane.

The two lifeboats, motor equipped, have a crew of four men each, Commander Sands said, and are capable of taking off, in the event of a rescue, 35 to 40 persons each.

A biting northwest wind and near zero weather prevailed on the New Jersey shore tonight.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. at St. John's Church, at Sixteenth and H streets northwest, with the rector, the Rev. Oliver J. Hart, officiating.

President Roosevelt yesterday issued the following statement on the death of Judge Payne:

"Again the Nation mourns the loss of a great man. And those of us who were privileged to know John Barton Payne, as a co-worker and friend, know how unfortunate and untimely is his passing.

"His was an unselfish service.

To Rest Beside Wife.

"To the lasting memory of this man it should and will be said that he never knew a boundary line either within or without the United States, when flood, fire, earthquake or other great adversity called the 'Greatest Mother' to help the needy."

Judge Payne's body will rest at his home at 1601 I street until the funeral. At the cemetery he will be laid beside his wife, the former Miss Jennie Byrd, who died in 1919.

Clean Out Kidney Poisons

Wash Out Your 15 Miles Of Kidney Tubes

If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day that contain nearly 4 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters become clogged with poisonous waste products and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult . . . which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.

This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.

Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 miles of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes. Treatments of this nature may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable relief that contains no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist.

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

Representative William B. Bankhead, who has been in the hospital since he was elected House majority leader, was pressed into service yesterday to whip rebellious Democrats into line for the works bill. The leader was propped up in bed and went to work on the telephone to line up the boys.

• • • •

There is much undercover resentment against the Administration's strong-arm forcing of the $4,800,000,000 works bill through without letting Congress in on any of the plans for using this huge fund. House Democrats muttered under their breathh, but the tight gag rules held them tight. It may be different in the Senate, where leaders are now saying privately that they expect to debate the measure more fully. The rebellion may reach a point where the Administration will be compelled to disclose some of its plans—tentative though they may be—for using this fund.

Never in peace-time, except during the banking crisis in March, 1933, has Congress been put in such a humiliating position. The House Appropriations Committee held hearings but the Administration officials who testified told them exactly nothing. They gave no indication as to who would have to do with deciding how the money would be spent, no indication as to how much money and how much reemployment experts calculated to go with each type of work. Only a few of the well-known possible uses to which the money might be put were admitted as being under consideration, such as grade crossing elimination and rural electrification. The Administration either has its plans well worked out, in which case Congress would seem to be entitled to be informed of them, or else it has not worked them out. Which is worse yet.

• • • •

Republicans in the House thought they were being dosed with additional White House pressure when the President's message transmitting the report of the National Resources Board was sent in during debate on the works bill. Inasmuch as this report was made public some time ago, some Republicans thought it was sent to Congress at this particular moment to increase the pressure, especially since the President's message referred to the works bill and explained how it would fit into the long-range plan, but that it was impossible to segregate items specifically at the moment.

• • • •

Although the House has been reduced to a new low in exercise of its legislative discretion by the steam rollering of the works bill, it clings to its elaborate parliamentary forms like an exiled grand duke to his remnants of grandeur.

For instance, the little ceremony which ushered in the presidential message yesterday. The House was in committee of the whole, which is a device for dispensing with the cumbersome House rules while a bill is under consideration. Representative O'Connor, of New York, Tammany's Harvard man, was in the chair as chairman of the committee of the whole.

Word is received that the presidential messenger is at the door. A member is prompted to move that the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union rise. The motion carries. O'Connor leaves the rostrum. Speaker Byrns ascends and takes the gavel. From the floor Chairman O'Connor reports that the committee of the whole has had under consideration House joint resolution 117, making appropriations for relief purposes, and has come to no resolution thereon. Speaker Byrns repeats the announcement for the information of the House.

The Speaker then recognizes the presidential messenger, who delivers the big brown paper parcel to Doorkeeper Sinnott, who dashes to the rostrum with it. After a brief fumbling with the wrapping, the presidential message is produced. A clerk reads it through in a droning voice.

Then a motion is made that the House resolve itself again into a committee of the whole. It carries. Speaker Byrns leaves the chair. O'Connor returns to the rostrum, calls the committee of the whole to order. Representatives resume their one and two-minute speeches, which by courtesy go under the designation of general debate, but which are little more than brief statements intended to serve as pegs upon which to hang extensions of remarks at greater length in the Congressional Record.

The House goes through all of this mumbo-jumbo with the solemnity of a hen sitting on a glass egg, as if unaware that the real hatching goes on at the White House, which has taken practically everything away from Congress except the cackle.

• • • •

It will be a joke on somebody if in about 18 months, after most of the $4,800,000,000 has been spent, the Supreme Court gets around to declaring the works bill an unconstitutional delegation of congressional authority.

The apologies which Secretary Ickes has sent to Postmaster General Farley, Attorney General Cummings and Senator Pat Harrison were the result of a toothache. Stuart Godwin, press representative for Ickes, went to the dentist to have a tooth pulled. While he was away his office issued a press release reprinting the Virgin Islands magazine article in which Farley, Cummings and Harrison were taken to task. The reprint was intended for the information of Department of Interior officials, but through an error in Godwin's office was labeled for the information of the press.

Dr. F. E. Townsend, tall, spare, gaunt-faced, wearing a hard collar 2 inches high, and president of the Old Age Revolving Pensions, Ltd.—though there is nothing very limited about his plan—put himself up for cross-examination at the National Press Club yesterday.

But he didn't handle himself as deftly as did Upton Sinclair when he appeared at the club last summer to defend his Epic plan.

Each faced an audience mainly hostile. Sinclair not only knew all the answers, but he eased them across with a smile which brought applause for him personally, if not for his ideas. Dr. Townsend, on the contrary, is new on the soap box. He was inclined to bristle at antagonistic questions instead of turning them off with soft answers. If Sinclair had Roosevelt's press conference technique, Dr. Townsend had Hoover's.

• • • •

"The trouble in this country," said Dr. Townsend, "is that we have been looking for something complicated, for a panacea."

"Then in what class would you put your plan?" he was asked.

"It is a logical cure for the ills of the country," the good doctor replied. He seemed a little puzzled by the laugh that followed.

The committee placed in evidence records of bids showing differences of as little as $33,000 between bids of the three major companies, described by Raushenbush, as "supposedly competing."

Meanwhile, the House Military Affairs Committee heard from a spokesman of the War Department, Col. C. T. Harris, Ordnance officer, that that branch of the Government desired to remove profiteering by industry during war time.

Urges Wartime Price Fixing.

Harris reviewed the military plan worked out by the industry he had previously described to the Senate committee in December, and urged a system of price fixing by which prices sufficiently high would be fixed to bring in even high cost producers if their output were necessary for war purposes. To trim the profits of low cost producers, he said the plan contemplated use of an excess profits tax.

Again the House committee was disappointed in the failure of Bernard Baruch and Gen. Hugh Johnson to appear. Representative McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, author of the measure before the committee, said he believed the two men desired first to consult with President Roosevelt.

Backing up its assertions that collusion among bidders had brought about an increase in cruiser prices from about $8,000,000 to $16,000,000, the committee presented several letters exchanged among the shipbuilding concerns intimating agreements to "go along." To each Bardo replied that there were no such agreements.

Drew Up Unified Plans.

He declared the three major companies, the New York, the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. and the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., had one program in common—they had set up the Marine Engineering Co., which drew unified plans and purchased materials jointly for the three companies. Their cooperation, Bardo emphasized, did not go to the point where they knew what each other was bidding.

Bardo said:

"I was elected president of the New York Shipbuilding Co. in October, 1928, and resigned in November, 1934. I am perfectly willing to testify as to any matters or transactions which occurred during my administration.

"I know of nothing in which I took part which is in any way reprehensible or in violation of the laws of the United States.

"This committee, however, has requested that I waive my constitutional rights as an American citizen and since I am unwilling to do so it seems proper that I should here state my reasons for refusing to comply with your request.

Refuses to Waive Immunity.

"In the first place, the hearings before your committee are entirely ex parte. No opportunity is afforded any witness to be represented by counsel, nor to volunteer any explanation of evidence which has been taken in such ex parte examination.

"From the most innocent transactions inferences and innuendos are drawn intended to induce the newspapers to print and the public to believe that sinister influences have dominated the shipbuilding industry and much that is reprehensible if not illegal has occurred.

"My opinion is that every citizen is assumed to be innocent until proven to be guilty and that the fifth amendment to the Constitution and laws pertaining to self-incrimination were adopted to protect citizens against inquisition of the character I refer to.

"Feeling as I do it seems to me that your request that I sign the waiver submitted is a request that I renounce my constitutional rights, and this I respectfully refuse to do.

"I am perfectly willing to testify as to all transactions of which I have knowledge and hope that I may be afforded an opportunity to do so. My decision not to sign the waiver request is my personal decision."

Battle Scarred Wooden Bridge To Be Replaced

Philippi, W. Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Ernest L. Bailey, State road commissioner, has informed citizens here that the historic, battle-scarred covered wooden bridge over the Tygarts Valley River will be supplanted at once with a steel and concrete structure. Construction will begin, he says, as soon as engineering plans are ready.

The old bridge, built in 1852, is one of the few covered bridges remaining in West Virginia. It served both Northern and Southern troops in the War Between the States and several skirmishes were fought on it, there being numerous marks of the conflicts on the structure.

The bridge will be moved to Battle Hill, nearby, and preserved as an historic monument, Bailey says, if some society or other interested group will supply the necessary funds.

The funds would be apportioned to the States on the basis of the percentage of their unemployed to the national jobless.

Direct relief would be handled chiefly through State and local agencies.

Political tests could not be required of the needy.

Funds unexpended by June 30, 1936, would revert to the Treasury.

Of more than a score of amendments advanced from the floor, the House approved only a proposal by Representative Bulwinkle (Democrat), North Carolina, to require detailed reports to Congress by the President on the way the money is spent.

Bacon's Plan Loses.

The nearest approach to a successful opposition amendment was introduced by Representative Bacon (Republican), New York. He sought to require publication of all presidential rules or regulations concerning public works in newspapers 30 days before they became operative. The committee of the whole approved the amendment by 151 to 141. A few minutes later the House proper rejected the proposal by 277 to 126.

Representative Hollister (Republican), Ohio, urged the change to prevent the works agency from imitating NRA, which he charged had imposed 10,000 rules and regulations of which there was little general knowledge among the public. He cited comment by Supreme Court justices on that point during consideration of a recovery case.

"Unless this bill is amended," he added, "how do we know how many rules and regulations, all of them having the full force and effect of law, will be promulgated?"

Representative Celler (Democrat), New York, assailed the Bacon suggestion as unnecessary.

"The Judiciary Committee," he explained, "has under consideration a bill to provide for publication of all executive orders—some 1,423 in number already—rules and regulations, in one volume."

Text of President's Message

The text of the President's message to Congress transmitting the reports of the National Resources Board and the Mississippi Valley Committee follows.

To the Congress of the United States:

During the three or four centuries of white men on the American continent, we find a continuous striving of civilization against nature. It is only in recent years that we have learned how greatly by these processes we have harmed nature and nature in turn has harmed us.

We should not too largely blame our ancestors, for they found such teeming riches in woods and soil and water—such abundance above the earth and beneath it—such freedom in the taking, that they gave small heed to the results that would follow the filling of their own immediate needs. Most of them, it is true, had come from many peopled lands where necessity had invoked the preserving of the bounties of nature. But they had come here for the obtaining of a greater freedom, and it was natural that freedom of conscience and freedom of government should extend itself in their minds to the unrestricted enjoyment of the free use of land and water.

Science Is Teacher.

Furthermore, it is only within our own generation that the development of science, leaping forward, has taught us where and how we violated nature's immutable laws and where and how we can commence to repair such havoc as man has wrought.

In recent years little groups of earnest men and women have told us of this havoc; of the cutting of our last stands of virgin timber; of the increasing floods; of the washing away of millions of acres of our top soils; of the lowering of our water-tables; of the dangers of one-crop farming; of the depletion of our minerals—in short, the evils that we have brought upon ourselves today and the even greater evils that will attend our children unless we act.

Such is the condition that attends the exploitation of our natural resources if we continue our planless course.

But another element enters in. Men and nature must work hand in hand. The throwing out of balance of the resources of nature throws out of balance also the lives of men. We find millions of our citizens stranded in village and on farm—stranded there because nature can not support them in the livelihood they had sought to gain through her. We find other millions gravitated to centers of population so vast that the laws of natural economics have broken down.

Misuse of Power.

If the misuse of natural resources alone were concerned, we should consider our problem only in terms of land and water. It is because misuse extends to what men and women are doing with their occupations and to their many mistakes in herding themselves together that I have chosen, in addressing the Congress, to use the broader term "national resources."

For the first time in our national history we have made an inventory of our national assets and the problems relating to them. For the first time we have drawn together the foresight of the various planning agencies of the Federal Government and suggested a method and a policy for the future.

I am sending you herewith the report of the National Resources Board, appointed by me on June 30, 1934, to prepare the comprehensive survey, which so many of us have sought so long. I transmit also the report made by the Mississippi Valley Committee of the Public Works Administration, which committee has also acted as the water planning committee in the larger report.

These documents constitute a remarkable foundation for what we hope will be a permanent policy of orderly development in every part of the United States. It is a large subject, but it is a great and inspiring subject. May I commend to each and every one of you who constitute the Congress of the United States a careful reading of these reports.

In this inventory of our national wealth we follow the custom of prudent people toward their own private property. We, as a nation, take stock of what we, as a nation, own. We consider the uses to which it can be put. We plan these uses in the light of what we want to be, of what we want to accomplish as a people.

Life-Giving Assets.

We think of our land and water and human resources not as static and sterile possessions, but as life-giving assets to be directed by wise provision for future days. We seek to use our natural resources not as a thing apart but as something that is interwoven with industry, labor, finance, taxation, agriculture, homes, recreation, good citizenship. The results of this interweaving will have a greater influence on the future American standard of living than all the rest of our economics put together.

For the coming 18 months I have asked the Congress for $4,000,000,000 for public projects. A substantial portion of this sum will be used for objectives suggested in this report. As years pass the Government should plan to spend each year a reasonable and continuing sum in the development of this program. It is my hope, for example, that after the immediate crisis of unemployment begins to mend, we can afford to appropriate approximately $500,000,000 each year for this purpose. Eventually this appropriation should replace all such appropriations given in the past without planning.

Permanent Resources Board.

A permanent National resources board, toward the establishment of which we should be looking forward, would recommend yearly to the President and the Congress priority of projects in the national plan. This will give the Congress, as is entirely proper, the final determination in relation to the projects and the appropriations involved.

As I have already stated, it is only because of the current emergency of unemployment and because of the physical impossibility of surveying, weighing and testing each and every project that a segregation of items is clearly impossible at the moment.

For the same reason the constituting of fixed and permanent administrative machinery would retard the immediate employment objective.

Our goal must be a national one. Achievements in the arts of communication, of transportation, of mechanized production, of agriculture, of mining and of power, do not minimize the rights of State governments, but they go far beyond the economics of State boundaries.

Only through the growth of thought and action in terms of national economics, can we best serve individual lives in individual localities.

It is, as these reports point out, an error to say that we have "conquered nature." We must, rather, start to shape our lives in more harmonious relationship with nature. This is a milestone in our progress toward that end. The future of every American family everywhere will be affected by the action we take.

Japanese Fliers Bomb Chahar, Kill 50 Chinese

that bombing planes, active yesterday along the border, renewed operations today.

A fleet of 20 armored cars, which cleared the way for the estimated 2,000 Japanese and Manchukuoan soldiers who struck at three Chahar towns Tuesday—also was reported cruising about the Chahar plains, near Tuhsikou Kuyuan at the Jehol boundary.

The Japanese military authorities here denied the planes had dropped any further bombs, asserting "the desired conditions within the disputed area have been accomplished."

(Advices to the Chinese National government at Nanking said the Chahar dispute had been settled. The advices came from Peiping.)

Report Advance Halted.

A Chinese military spokesman here said there had been no major developments along the border since 7 p. m. yesterday, confirming reports the Japanese advance had been halted.

The Chinese placed their casualties in the fighting at 40 to 50, while the Japanese said they lost two killed and six wounded. All the Chinese were killed or injured in the aerial raids, it was stated.

(Dispatches from Tokyo quoted Rengo dispatches from Hsinking as saying one army sergeant was killed and two officers wounded by machine-gun fire when an advancing Japanese column met resistance from Chinese troops.)

While Gen. Sung Chen-Yuan, Chinese governor of Chahar, conferred here today with Hoy Ingh-Ching, chairman of the Peiping military council, dispatches from Kalgan, near the border of Inner Mongolia, said 500 more soldiers, arrived today to reinforce Japanese troops near Kuyuan, in Chahar.

Position of Japanese.

A regiment of armored cars, a battery of field artillery and cavalry made up the occupying force, it was understood.

(The Rengo dispatches to Tokyo said the Japanese occupied "several" obscure villages. Whether they were in Jehol, considered part of Manchukuo, or in Chahar was not clear, however, since the Jehol-Chahar boundary is disputed.)

The Japanese versions said trouble started along the Chahar border January 22, when the Nagami regiment, advancing from Shao Chang, northeast of Hsichatze, met Chinese militia armed with machine guns. After fighting, in which both sides suffered casualties, the militia was dispersed.

Airplanes Dispatched.

Airplanes were sent into action the following day. An artillery bombardment followed, under cover of which the Japanese infantry advanced.

The Japanese said Gen. Sugihara, Japanese commander of Jehol, was negotiating with Gen. Sung, governor of Chahar, for settlement of the difficulties which, the Japanese alleged, grew out of the alleged penetration into Jehol of Sung's troops.

Planes 'Reconnoitering,' Tokyo War Office Says

Tokyo, Jan. 24 (AP).—A Rengo (Japanese) news agency dispatch from Hsinking, capital of Manchukuo, today said Japanese planes were bombing the Jehol-Chahar border, but the war office insisted the planes were only reconnoitering.

While Rengo reported one Japanese sergeant killed and two officers wounded when advancing troops met Chinese machine-gun fire, the war office said the activity of the troops was confined to watching withdrawal of Chinese forces from Jehol.

Reports from Hsinking said the Japanese command, unimpressed by pleas from frightened Chinese residents that it halt military operations, was determined to "deal drastically with Sung Chen-Yuan (governor of the Chinese Province of Chahar) as long as he manifests hostility to Japan and Manchukuo."

Reports from Peiping.

Government officials, however, received reports from Peiping that Sung, promising prompt compliance with Japanese demands, had explained the failure of his forces to leave Jehol was due to misunderstood orders. The officials predicted speedy settlement of the issue.

Dispute over the actual boundary was partly responsible for the clash, it was said here. The Japanese maintain that the spur of the Great Wall shooting off northwestward to Tuhsikuo forms the frontier, while Chinese say it is situated two miles to the east.

Canadian Wheat Estimate Up.

Ottawa, Jan. 24 (AP).—The Dominion Bureau of Statistics today estimated Canada's 1934 wheat crop at 275,849,000 bushels, compared with an estimate in November, 1934, of 275,252,000 bushels. The revised figure for the 1933 crop was 281,892,000 bushels.

Alibi Crumbles as Hauptmann Begins Defense Testimony

Early Setback Upsets Claims Of His Counsel

in his bakery the night of the kidnaping might be the line that divides guilt and innocence in the minds of the jury. But an uncertain statement such as Frederickson made today can be damaging. No one knew it any better than Attorney General David T. Wilentz when he began to cross-examine Frederickson.

He wheedled him, had him repeat over and over that he couldn't swear that Hauptmann was there that night.

Defense Hope Dims.

The prisoner seemed to realize himself that the case was not unrolling like Fisher had said it would unroll. Hauptmann went back to the witness chair, a grimmer man, no smile on his lips now.

There is talk on the street corners of Flemington tonight that the defense considers Frederickson's testimony as unimportant—that some day soon it will produce another and better witness who was in the bakery that night and who will say that Hauptmann, too, was there.

Mrs. Katie Frederickson, wife of the baker, can not do it, because she tried today and failed. She testified she was off duty on the night of March 1, 1932.

And so it was not Hauptmann who made the news today when the hour finally came for him to start his story. It was Christian Frederickson who made it, and it was Lloyd Fisher who helped him.

For Fisher's opening statement revealed that the defense has a witness who will swear that he saw a man carrying a ladder along the road to the Lindbergh home on the night of the kidnaping.

Tells of Arrival in U. S.

Fisher said this witness had conferred with State's attorneys previously, and the best guess to his identity is that he is Ben Lupica, a Princeton student, who already has told of seeing such a man. The State failed to call Lupica as a witness and gave no explanation for not doing so.

After the Fredericksons had come and gone, Reilly went back to Hauptmann. He asked questions about things that happened long ago and far away.

Hauptmann traced his arrival in the United States. He told how he went to work as a dishwasher, progressed until he had a job as a dyer and then became carpenter in the days when men who could use saws and hammers were earning $10 a day.

Reilly kept threading one line of questioning in and out of the testimony:

"And you saved part of your money?"

"Yes."

"And when you were making $50 a week, how much of that did you spend?"

"Twelve dollars."

"You kept money in the bank and around the house, too?"

"Yes."

He was trying to build up a defense against the State's charge that on April 2, 1932, Hauptmann suddenly became wealthy because of a night rendezvous among the tombstones of St. Raymond's Cemetery.

Savings Stressed.

Reilly led the witness from job to job, bringing out each time how much money he earned and how much he saved.

"Your wife was working some of the time, too?"

"Yes."

"How much did she make?"

"Between $30 and $33 a week."

"What did she do with her money?"

"She paid for the household things."

"So you could save more of your money?"

"Yes."

Reilly's questions drew answers that pictured the Hauptmanns as hard-working Germans who finally amassed a family stake of $5,000. They bought an automobile and decided to take a trip to California.

"How far did you get on that trip?" Reilly asked.

"Half a block," Hauptmann replied, and there came to his face that odd grin that goes higher on the right side of his mouth than it does on the left.

"Your car broke down?"

"Yes, but we went to California later."

At no time today—except when Frederickson testified—did Reilly and Hauptmann come to grips with the vital points in the issue that is on trial here. That will come tomorrow when the ghost of Isidor Fisch will walk the courtroom while Reilly tries to show that a dead man committed the crime for which Hauptmann is being tried.

Ask Directed Verdict.

Defense lawyers went mechanically through a demand for a directed verdict of innocence today. They argued that the State had not proved that Hauptmann murdered the Lindbergh baby. The court listened gravely to the argument for 40 minutes and then ruled

"Motion denied."

Then Fisher, a Flemington lawyer, who knows every man and woman on the jury, got up and drew a blueprint of the defense's case. He began with a general denial of Hauptmann's guilt and then swung into these specific reasons.

"They allege this defendant committed murder in Hunterdon County as the result of a burglary.

"We propose to show you a complete alibi for every bit of evidence placing him in Hopewell on or about March 1, 1932, the day of the kidnaping.

"We believe we'll be able to prove that Bruno Richard Hauptmann on the day of the kidnaping took his kit of tools and went downtown to look for work.

"Is that the work of a man about to commit the nefarious crime of kidnaping?

"We shall prove that that night he called for his wife at 8 o'clock.

Says He Called for Wife.

"His wife, frugal, hard working, was employed in a bakeshop. He was obliged to call for and did call for her at the very hour when he is charged with that crime.

"Now, April 2 (the day the ransom was paid) is a date Hauptmann can remember, for he is a German. On the first Saturday of every month it was the custom of Germans, like Hauptmann, to gather in their homes for a little music, a little song. We shall prove that on that night he was with friends at his home for a little party.

"On November 26, 1933, when Cecile Barr said he bought a theater ticket from her, he was in his home, host to friends at his birthday party.

"There are the three days, and there are the three alibis.

"Now as to the handwriting. For financial reasons we could not produce the battery of outstanding experts the State produced. He comes into this court without funds. He hasn't a dollar.

"Money for the defense has come mainly from his own counsel.

"We shall prove that small moneys put in the bank by Mrs. Hauptmann since 1924—and which could have nothing to do with the kidnaping—have been tied up by the State.

"That's why we are operating on very limited funds.

"Fortune Overestimated."

"Now as to Hauptmann's finances, we shall prove the State of New Jersey has vastly overestimated the amount of Hauptmann's financial transactions.

"We'll show that some of that money the State charges he had was 'repeat' money.

"We'll show you clearly that Hauptmann would go to a bank frequently and take out $500, and then change his mind and put it back. That is 'repeat money' and yet the prosecution adds it all up and says it proves he had a lot of money.

"We'll show you that Hauptmann did deal with a man named Isidor Fisch. They dealt in two businesses. One was dealing in the stock market, the other was dealing in furs. Hauptmann handled the brokerage end of this partnership.

"The fur business was operated by Fisch. We'll show you he came down into this country and bought pelts. They made a very fine profit on the fur business.

"We'll prove that Fisch on several occasions went into his pockets to balance his accounts. That is done every day by business people.

"We'll prove that they took money from one business to another when cash to balance one was needed.

"We will prove the Hauptmanns were people of means prior to April, 1932, if we show you that Hauptmann was a man who dealt in margins."

Hauptmann watched the jury box intently apparently seeking their reactions. Mrs. Hauptmann had a high color.

"We'll show you that the witness Hochmuth was discharged from a position in New York because he had hallucinations, and used to see people who didn't exist. (Hochmuth said Hauptmann was in Hopewell the day of the kidnaping.)

"Now as to Whited. We intend to show you he never saw a man on that highway. We'll show you a man who worked with him all day and saw no such things.

"As to the witness Rossiter, we shall prove by physical evidence that his story can not be true. We will show you that the surroundings in which he saw Hauptmann never existed.

Balance of Case.

"As to the girl who testified she saw Hauptmann watching Dr. Condon in that Bronx station, we shall show you that this incident occurred before she even knew, or anybody knew, that Jafsie was the go-between and we may be able to prove Dr. Condon was never in that station.

"Now I want to come to the conduct of the police in this case. We shall show you that no case has ever been so mishandled, so mangled.

"Particularly that of the witness Kelly, who found no fingerprints. We'll show you that Dr. Hudson came down two days late and took some 800 fingerprints.

"That is representative of the police handling of the entire case.

"We will produce before you a man who has been used by the State continuously, and who was the last man to see the actual kidnaper at 6 p. m. on the road with a ladder, on the way to the Lindbergh home.

"Now if we produce this witness, who will testify that he saw a man with a ladder, but that it was not Bruno Richard Hauptmann, we'll expect you to consider that."

Suspect's Wife Will Be Next Defense Witness

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann will be led through the remainder of the general outline of his life, as begun by his counsel today, and then will be called upon to explain many of the State's exhibits placed in evidence against him, Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel, announced today.

The man charged with the kidnaping and murder of the Lindbergh baby will be on direct examination all day Friday. In event that court is recessed Saturday, Hauptmann will be turned over to the State for cross-examination Monday.

As soon as the State completes its examination of the prisoner, his wife, Anna, will be called as the second witness for the defense. Another early witness for the prisoner will be Walter Manley, who was in Frederickson's bakery on the night of the kidnaping, March 1, 1932, and will testify that he saw Hauptmann there.

"I feel that Hauptmann made a good impression today," Reilly said. "I believe he will be better on cross-examination than on direct."

George K. Large, special prosecutor for the State, likewise indicated the suspect had made an impression on the courtroom. He said that Hauptmann had, in his brief hour on the stand, indicated the high intelligence the State already has accredited him with possessing.

Kent Board to Act On Cattle Problem

Chestertown, Md., Jan. 24.—Decision as to whether a paid Federal agent will continue to be employed in the interest of bovine tuberculosis eradication or whether an attempt will be made, in the interest of economy, to combine the work with neighboring Queen Anne's County or a group of Eastern Shore communities will be made at a meeting of the Kent County board of commissioners here next Tuesday.

The recent dismissal of Dr. Charles A. Turner, expert of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry, who has been employed by the county for the last seven years at an average salary of $2,500, was prompted by the desire of the newly elected board to cut down county expenses, President G. Ellsworth Leary said today. Dr. Turner will appear before the board to explain whether the absence of a Federal veterinarian in the county will prevent farmers from obtaining indemnity payments for condemned cattle.

Kenney, district deputy game warden, has been notified by the State conservation department that the first shipment of game for restocking will arrive in this city on or about February 15, and will consist of 564 rabbits and 50 Canadian ruffed grouse. Other shipments of game for restocking are expected in the spring.

The State game department, through Harry Kenney and Joseph A. Minke, the two local wardens, will furnish grain without charge to any organization or individual who will distribute it where it can be reached by the birds during the snow season.

Ladder Fit in Hauptmann's Auto, Jury Is Told

Wood Expert's Story Climaxes Jersey's Case

State and Defense Engage in Battle of Wits Over Last Witness.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 24 (AP).—New Jersey brought its murder case against Bruno Richard Hauptmann to its closing hours today, after three weeks of testimony.

Court was convened at 10:26 a. m., and Arthur J. Koehler, Federal wood expert, was called back to the witness stand by Attorney General David T. Wilentz.

Wilentz had Koehler tell the jury that the "rail 16" of the ladder was not part of the lumber shipment traced to the Bronx lumber yard. "Rail 16" is the rail which allegedly was cut from the attic board in Hauptmann's home.

Wilentz asked the court for permission to introduce Hauptmann's automobile as an exhibit.

"We have it." He said how the court had examined it.

The purpose, he said, was to show the car was owned and operated by Hauptmann at the time of arrest.

Justice Trenchard said that a photograph should be produced instead.

Q. What was it you traced to the lumber yard? A. Just the two bottom rails of the ladder.

Koehler then said the other uprights were of fir, with the exception of "Rail 16," and the rungs were of ponderosa pine.

Ladder Fit In Car.

Wilentz showed Koehler the picture of the Hauptmann car.

Q. Have you seen this automobile? A. I have.

Q. Did it have a New York license? A. It did.

Q. Did you take this ladder and attempt to fit it in that car? A. I did.

Q. Did it fit? A. It did with several inches to spare. It fitted in on top of the front and rear seats.

A photograph was shown by C. Lloyd Fisher, defense counsel, to Hauptmann, who studied it for several minutes. The defendant showed increasing interest in his case as the time for his appearance on the stand approached. He pointed out to Fisher that the photograph showed a trunk at the rear of the car.

The State brought the car to Flemington without the trunk and Justice Trenchard admitted the photograph with the difference stipulated.

Frederick A. Pope, of the defense, began cross-examination of Koehler, questioning him on his testimony in prior cases.

The defense attorney directed Koehler's attention to Federal Trade Commission suits in which he testified on "wood failures."

Koehler explained the cases involved questions of wood weakness or overloading.

Q. You have never undertaken in court before to identify chisel or plane marks on lumber? A. No.

Q. This is the first time you have been called upon to testify to that? A. Yes.

Mark in Ladder Rail.

Q. Now you demonstrated to the jury yesterday that one of the notches in the ladder rail was made by a three-quarter-inch chisel?—A. Yes.

Q. It could well be made by any standard three-quarter-inch chisel?—A. Yes.

Q. You were shown, by the prosecutor, these chisels, one a quarter-inch, one a half-inch, and one three-quarter?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you shown any other standard set?—A. No.

Q. You were shown the set in Hauptmann's chest?—A. Yes.

Koehler said three rails of the ladder were North Carolina pine and the others Douglas fir.

Q. You do not know the ladder contained a piece of Douglas fir when it was originally found?—A. I didn't see it when it was found.

Pope then directed the expert's attention to the ladder section which contains the alleged attic floor board as an upright. The other upright was Douglas fir, Koehler said.

Q. You do not know whether both those uprights were originally Douglas fir?—A. I do not.

Norfolk and Western Wins Right to Extend

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday granted permission to the Norfolk & Western Railway Co. to construct 38.5 miles extension of its line of railroad in Buchanan County, Va., according to the Associated Press.

One segment of the line would be from a connection with the present terminus at Grundy in a general southeasterly direction along the Levisa River and Garden Creek, approximately 14.5 miles. The other would extend from a connection with the Garden Creek line at the mouth of Dismal Creek easterly to a point near the mouth of Knob Branch, approximately 24 miles. The extensions would serve various mining and lumber companies.

Hauptmann's Own Testimony As He Battles to Save His Life

Q. Were you spending all you made?—A. I spent a little.

Q. Did you open a bank account?—A. Yes, downtown at the Bridge, a branch.

Reilly asked that another witness be allowed to take the stand and Hauptmann step down temporarily. Permission was granted. Hauptmann returned to his chair at the rail.

Christian Frederickson was the man who took the chair Hauptmann vacated. He said he owned a bakery in 1932 and that Mrs. Hauptmann worked for him.

The Danish baker said there were five or six lunch tables in his bakery, and added his wife helped about the shop.

Q. Did your wife have any nights off?—A. Yes. She usually had Tuesday and Friday nights off.

Q. When the wife took her nights out, did Anna Hauptmann work?—A. Yes.

Escorted to Work by Her Husband.

Q. Who was in the habit of bringing Anna to work?—A. Her husband.

Q. When was Anna through on Tuesday and Thursday nights?—A. About 9 o'clock. Her husband came in the car and took her home.

Q. Is it the best of your recollection that Bruno Richard Hauptmann called for his wife Tuesday night, March 1, 1932?—A. My best recollection is that Bruno usually called for her, and he must have been there that night. I can't swear to it.

Q. Of course, there was nothing that made you write down that Bruno was there—it was just a Tuesday night?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know March 1, 1932, was a Tuesday night?—A. I know it now.

When Hauptmann brought his wife to work, the witness said, he did not see him.

Q. Have you any recollection when your wife came home that night? A. She came home about 10 or 11 o'clock.

Testifies He Kept Store Open Late.

Q. It wasn't unusual for your store to be open at 9 o'clock at night? A. I worked at night and I kept it open until 1 o'clock sometimes.

"You may take the witness," said Reilly quietly at last.

Wilentz got up and faced the witness with the question whether or not he had told the New York police he closed his bakery at 8 o'clock.

He answered he kept open as long as he was there.

Wilentz read from the police report after Hauptmann's arrest that Frederickson said he did not know definitely whether his wife was off that night.

The witness explained he thought she was away because it was a Tuesday night, her regular night off.

"So after talking it over with your wife you made up your mind—what?—A. That she was off.

Wilentz kept pressing the witness with the question whether Hauptmann had called for his wife that night.

Q. Did you see him there that night?—A. I don't say. I can't say he wasn't, I can't say he was.

Q. Was he there?—A. I can't say. I can't swear. I don't remember.

Q. You knew that Tuesday, March 1, was the night?—A. Yes.

Q. You don't know whether Hauptmann was there?—A. I can't swear to it whether I saw him.

Q. You do know there were some Tuesday nights when he was not there?—A. Yes.

Reilly interposed:

"What year?"

The question was not answered and the witness was excused.

Q. Did you have Tuesday nights out?—A. Every Tuesday.

Q. Would Hauptmann drive Anna there in his car?—A. So she told me.

Wilentz objected and Reilly corrected the statement.

Q. Do you remember the night of March 1, 1932?—A. It were Tuesday. I were out.

Q. That was the night of the kidnaping?—A. It was.

Q. You knew?—A. We talked of it the next day.

Reilly finished the witness' direct examination after eliciting information that Hauptmann called for his wife, according to what she heard from Mrs. Hauptmann.

Reilly turned the woman over to Wilentz for cross-examination.

Q. You didn't see Hauptmann bring his wife there?—A. No.

Q. You didn't see him come for her?—A. I wasn't there.

Q. You didn't see her in that building that night?—A. If she wasn't I would have known about it.

Q. But you weren't there?—A. No.

Attended Party at Hauptmann Home.

The baker's wife told next how she attended a party at the Hauptmanns' home on November 26, 1933, given in honor of Isador Fisch's departure for Europe.

Reilly turned to the meeting of Mrs. Frederickson with Fisch.

Fisch, she said, was at "Anna Hauptmann's house" one night when the German friends of Hauptmann were holding a party. They all went together, she said.

Witness Identifies Picture of Fisch.

"That's Fisch," she said.

"I offer it in evidence," he said.

Q. Did Fisch ever have any money that night?—A. Yes, he did.

Q. Are you familiar with money?—A. Yes.

Q. What kind of money, did you see the color of it?—A. No, I was driving.

She was released after Reilly's last question and Hauptmann returned to the stand.

He marched with long, quick strides as though he was anxious to continue his story.

"Now," said Reilly, "I think we had got to the point where you had come over to Lakewood. Can you remember when that was?"

In his answer Hauptmann gave no date but described how he obtained the Lakewood job through a newspaper ad.

Reilly took up his tracing of Hauptmann's various employments in this country. He was proceeding very methodically. Hauptmann, tapping one heel nervously, told of taking work in New York after the return from the Lakewood job. He said Diedig was engaged as his helper.

Q. In 1919 did you work in Mount Vernon for an Italian carpenter?—A. Yes.

Q. From 1925 to 1929 were you out of work often?—A. Not often.

Q. Did you work Saturdays and Sundays?—A. Yes, Saturday afternoons and Sundays.

Hauptmann made "approximately $1,000" in such overtime work.

Says He Always Kept Money in House.

"Some of the money, I always keep in the house. Always," he explained of his earnings.

Q. Did you keep the money in your house at that time?—A. Yes.

Q. How much did you have in your house in 1929?—A. Between $3,000 and $3,500.

Q. In cash?—A. Yes.

Q. Did Mrs. Hauptmann work at the time?—A. Yes, all the time, except for two trips to Europe.

His wife, Hauptmann said, sailed third-class on German boats. The trips cost approximately $300.

The trips occurred in 1928 and 1932. On the first, Hauptmann said, his wife took along the daughter of Mrs. Achenbach (her former employer).

Col. Lindbergh's level eyes were never off Hauptmann as he testified.

The serious-faced defendant gripped his arms with his hands throughout the questioning, shifting his position occasionally in the chair.

He told that he saved most of his earnings and his wife's income contributed to living expenses.

Q. How much money did you have in the house on March 1, 1932?—A. Three or four thousand dollars.

Started for California in a Car.

In 1925 Hauptmann and Diebig started for California in a car, he said.

Q. How far did you get in that car?—A. About half a block.

Q. Broke down?—A. Yes.

Hauptmann said at the time he actually made the California trip, July, 1931, he had "between $3,000 and $4,000" saved in his house.

Q. How much did you have in the bank?—A. About $500 or $700.

Q. So, all in all, between your house and the bank, you had about or almost $5,000 at that time?—A. Yes, about.

The story included several names of German associates and Hauptmann, smiling, patiently spelled them in a low tone for the court stenographer sitting below him.

Reilly interjected the name of the State's surprise witness, Mrs. Achenbach, who said Hauptmann had walked with a limp after the kidnaping.

He asked the alien whether he had showed her souvenirs of the California trip upon his return, and got an affirmative reply.

Hauptmann said Mrs. Achenbach lived only a few doors from him at that time.

Hauptmann said he bought his Dodge car in September, 1931, and had it when he was arrested.

Defendant Tells of Week-End Trips.

Q. When did you first go to Hunter's Island?—A. In 1928.

Q. Were you and other Germans in the habit of going there?—A. Lots of us. Week-ends.

The former German army machine gunner described what he and his acquaintances would do in their visits to Hunter's Island. Swimming, soccer, al fresco lunches had their part in the story.

Q. Was the reason for your wife's second visit to Germany the fact that it was her mother's seventieth birthday?—A. The only reason.

Hauptmann told of getting employment at the Majestic Apartments in 1932 after going to the Reliance Employment Agency. He said he paid the customary $10 agency fee.

Q. On the 29th, Monday, did you go any place looking for work?—A. No. The morning I spent sharpening the tools, put them in the car and took them down to the carpenter shop at the Majestic Apartments and put them there.

Q. Did you go back there any time after the 29th?—A. I was there at 8 o'clock of the morning.

Q. In the meantime were you trying to obtain a position as a carpenter at Radio City?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever obtain work there?—A. No.

"Quit April 2, 1932," He Declares.

The defendant, still intent on his questioner, described the employment at the apartment and asserted:

"On the first of March, 1932, I was down at the apartment at 8 o'clock in the morning."

Hauptmann said he first went, March 1, 1932, to the apartment to see if a job was ready for him.

He went to work March 15, and "quitted April 2, 1932."

Q. April 2, 1932, was a Saturday?—A. It was.

Q. What time did you go to work?—A. The usual time, 7 o'clock.

Q. What time did you quit work?—A. 5 o'clock.

Reilly was starting to lead Hauptmann through an account of his movements on the ransom pay-off day.

Q. And the Majestic Apartments is how many miles away from your home in the Bronx?—A. Eight miles.

Q. Now, you heard the apartment timekeeper testify you did not work April 2. Do you say positively you worked April 2?—A. Yes.

Q. And you were paid for it?—A. Yes.

Q. You resigned on Monday?—A. I resigned on Saturday (April 2) and I went down to get my money on Monday.

Says Pay Was Too Low.

Hauptmann said he quit his job as carpenter at the Majestic because he was only paid $80 per month instead of the $100 he had been promised.

Hauptmann told Reilly how he used the subways to go down town in New York and the changes he had to make.

Q. What time did you get home April 2?—A. About 6 o'clock.

Reilly asked Hauptmann to tell of the evening.

"Mr. Kloppenberg came there," Hauptmann said, "because it was the usual music evening."

Q. How late did this monthly practice break up?—A. Not before 11 o'clock.

Reilly suggested an adjournment, but Wilentz asked that the names of those present be given.

"Kloppenberg, my wife and myself," Hauptmann replied. "We played mandolin hour or hour and a half."

Q. On April 2, did you ever leave your home after you came in? You were there all the time?—A. All the time.

The court adjourned at 4:31 p. m. and, while the jury filed out, Hauptmann sat in his chair at the defense table.

Why Does the Snow Melt on One House and Not on the Other?

The answer is simple. The man who owns the stucco and brick house has had it insulated with Johns-Manville ROCK WOOL INSULATION. This Rock Wool Insulation reduces the heating bill in the Winter by keeping in the heat, and makes the house cooler in Summer by keeping out Summer's heat.

Rock Wool Insulation is made from molten limestone, which is poured into a jet of live steam which literally "blows" it into particles of Rock Wool. This wool is blown into your home's walls and crevices by carefully regulated pneumatic pressure machine.

ing out in different sections of the city, forced tenants into the bitter cold yesterday morning.

Firemen carried two children down ladders at 3:30 a. m., when flames forced other tenants into the street from their lodgings over a lunchroom at 1336 Ninth street northwest.

The youngsters were William Contes, 7, and his sister, Ethel, 9. The blaze was discovered by their mother, Mrs. Harry Contes, who saw smoke billowing from a restaurant below. She, her husband and a roomer escaped after the children were rescued.

Second Fire.

At 9 a. m. a second fire forced tenants from their dwelling at 116 C street northeast. Four families fled when the blaze, which started in the furnace, had eaten into the first floor. Damage was slight.

The District announced last night that 5,100 of those employed in clearing away the snow here were relief workers, who received $2.40 for their day's work. Fourteen hundred were regular District workers, receiving $3.60.

60 Below in Quebec.

Far up in Quebec Province the mercury sank to 60 below zero, the Associated Press asserted, and zero weather moved into the Eastern States for the night, but the grip of sub-zero temperatures was relaxing in the Middle West after a siege that had caused days of intense suffering.

It was warmer at Calgary, Alberta, yesterday, with 44, than it was in Miami, Fla., where the mercury sank to 38. At Medicine Hat, Alta., the mercury soared from 10 below to 40 above zero.

New York put 30,000 to work on it 17.5-inch snow with the mercury at 9 above. Maine was snowbound.

The Associated Press placed the toll from the storm at 14 for New England, 10 for Mississippi, 4 for Tennessee, 11 for New York City, 3 for upstate New York, 11 for New Jersey, 1 for Kentucky, 19 for Indiana, 5 for Minnesota, 6 for Michigan, 2 for West Virginia, 13 for Pennsylvania, 3 for Wisconsin, 13 for Iowa, 2 for Georgia, 10 for the Pacific Northwest, 11 for Texas, 12 for Oklahoma and 3 for Montana.

Nice to Set Up Mining Board

Governor Plans Inquiry to Better Conditions in Maryland.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Believing that the mining laws of Maryland could be greatly improved, Gov. Harry W. Nice today initiated a movement for formation of an unpaid commission to make a thorough investigation with the view of revamping the existing code, if necessary, in order to place Maryland on a par with other coal-producing States.

The Governor feels that the commission should have two representatives of the miners, operators and the State and Federal bureau of mines, and he has written letters to R. A Stallings, secretary of the George's Creek and Upper Potomac Coal Control Association, of Cumberland, and officials of the other organizations asking them to make such designations.

The Governor has named as temporary chairman John J. Rutledge, of Baltimore, chief engineer of the Bureau of Mining, to call the commission together. He suggested that the commission settle to its task as early as possible and to recommend legislation to be incorporated in a bill to be prepared by him and presented at the current session of the General Assembly.

Ickes Is 'Sorry' About Release; Sends Apology

Farley, Cummings, Harrison Told He Didn't Give Out Nation Article.

he said, "but after all the article was published in a magazine of general circulation and was accessible to anyone."

Ickes was "on the spot" also because of insistence of some members of Congress that they be assured he would not handle the $4,800,000,000 works program.

"I have known for some time," Ickes said, "that I wasn't loved by everybody with the fervor with which I should be loved. I have accumulated a choice list of enemies, including a contracting ring, oil interests, utility interests, and those who want favors they haven't received."

Answers Forestry Charge.

"I understand I am under serious indictment of not being polite. If that is all the criticism they can make of the PWA, God bless them."

Ickes added that he had been compelled to "say no to a good many Congressmen."

Ickes also undertook to answer a third attack of which he has been the target this week. This came from the Forestry Service, which contended Ickes, in a speech in New York, had suggested the Interior Department should take over all conservation work.

Has "No Expectations," Says.

"I didn't mention the Forestry Service," Ickes said. "I said that all conservation activities should be concentrated. I didn't say where."

Asked if he meant the Interior Department, he declined to answer.

Returning to the public works controversy, Ickes denied he ever had said he knew he would not administer the new program.

"Only one man can tell you who will administer it. I have no expectations in that connection, reasonable or otherwise."

The Acquittal.

When a man has been acquitted in our well-known courts of law, it may freely be admitted that our course is often raw; we don't view his vindication in a spirit good and kind, glad that all his tribulation is a story left behind. Sometimes in ignoble fury we may voice our grouch and grudge, wishing we might hang the jury and the lawyers and the judge. And the man who was acquitted comes from prison feeling gay, feeling sure that he is fitted to resume the old-time play. With his old-time friends he'll mingle, with the friends of long ago, with the married and the single, with the mighty and the low. Everywhere he will be meeting friends whose words will leave him cheered, they will give him cordial greeting, knowing that his record's cleared. He will meet them in the churches, he will meet them in the street, and they'll come down from their perches kindly blessings to repeat. For he has been vindicated, and the courts have set him free, and he is no longer weighted with a charge that's dire to see. So he steps forth from his prison with a jaunty step and bold; disappointment now is his'n, for his friends are stern and cold. People dodge as he advances, as he walks in single file, they refuse to meet his glances, they refuse to mark his smile. And his wife, who once was toasted, finds her friends exceeding cool, and his harmless kids are roasted when they chase themselves to school.

A Five-Year Census.

The Business and Advisory Council, recently designated as an agency through which the views of business men on matters of legislative policy might be conveyed to the Administration, has recommended that a population census be taken every five years. Although Secretary Roper does not approve of the permanent substitution of a five-year for a ten-year census, he does believe that there is need for a special census at the present time.

Despite Secretary Roper's assertion to the contrary, there is little use for such a census as an emergency expedient to determine the amount of unemployment. Any system for recording the volume of unemployment that does not provide continuous, up-to-the-minute information has little value to those engaged in administering work-relief projects or giving other kinds of aid to the unemployed. A one-time enumeration of the unemployed would have only historical value by the time it had been completed and might be positively misleading to those who tried to utilize the findings in constructive fashion. Unemployment data to be useful should be assembled through the medium of public employment exchanges, at which those out of work would be registered at all times. By such means only is it possible to obtain a serviceable census of numbers unemployed.

However, Secretary Roper has cited much more compelling reasons for urging a special population census. He refers to the need of determining the extent of shifts in population and why these shifts are occurring. He further mentions the possibility of classifying groups of people according to the type of employment for which they are fitted. Such facts unquestionably should be in the possession of government agencies if there is to be any extensive social planning carried on. The information would certainly be required to effect a better distribution of population by removing people from congested areas or regions of low productivity to places where they can make a living and serve the community more effectively.

Industry, too, has need of more information about the changes in population that have occurred during the past four or five years of depression. Geographical and occupational shifts have a direct effect upon the character and the volume of demand for the products of industry. Then, too, the location of new industries, and plans for the future of existing establishments, may be modified on the basis of more complete information, such as the projected special census could supply. Such a census may properly be urged, therefore, without appealing to the emergency as an excuse for advocating it, or suggesting, as does Secretary Roper, that the project be financed out of the prospective $4,000,000,000 work relief fund.

Out Of Season.

The heaviest snowfall of the winter—so far—naturally brought forth many variations of opinion. Some proclaimed its beauty; others shivered as it sifted into their inadequate shelter; children greeted it gleefully; older people put on chains and trusted that the worst would soon be over. But there is one class of individuals to whom it meant nothing at all. That is, the writers of advertising copy—those eternal chanters of "it isn't raining rain to me, it's raining daffodils."

While headlines are shouting sleet, snow, hail, advertisements are whispering panamas, pastels and cruise clothes. The man in the street is shaking his head over the prospects of a long, hard winter. The man in the advertising copy room is shaking his head over spring ensembles, tricky shorts and other cool apparel to intrigue those whom he terms "followers of the sun."

It sounds comparatively easy—this business of keeping two jumps ahead of the hounds. It appears to be merely a matter of routine. Hardly has the crackle of Christmas tissue paper silenced before the ad writer must turn to thoughts of Easter bonnets and bunnies; when Easter arrives he is already thinking up novel ways of making the Fourth of July safe but not sane; and when that day of independence looms into view, he is laboriously struggling with grotesque masks and novel costumes for Halloween. The exciting tang of autumn is entirely lost on him as he finds himself deep in starry designs for the yule season.

Seems simple enough, doesn't it? Apparently all one needs is a clocklike mind that can be set forward three months, a flair for ideas, and a complete oblivion to the world of reality. The last qualification is what really constitutes the difference between a successful and a starving ad writer. It might be, it is true, relatively easy to sit down now and write about primroses. But before any one gives up his present occupation for that of writing advertising copy, he should consider the prospect of sitting in a Washington office in August, coat off, collar unbuttoned, tongue hanging out, soaked in perspiration, writing about the virtues of a sealskin coat for keeping out wintry blasts.

The Blank Check.

In the President's message on the work of the National Resources Board he yesterday told Congress that: "Men and nature must work hand in hand. The throwing out of balance of the resources of nature throws out of balance also the lives of men."

One thought on this excellent admonition which comes inevitably to mind is that if the President had thought of it earlier there would have been no AAA restriction program. The plow-under policy was not a very happy illustration of man and nature working hand in hand.

But there is a second thought, of more immediate importance, which springs from the ironic fact that President Roosevelt does not see the applicability of his philosophy of balance to the political scene. Yet only slight substitutions in his own words are necessary to construct an aphorism far more significant than that which he actually used to Congress. It would have been cause for an optimism now lacking had the President said that: "The Executive and Legislature must work hand in hand. The throwing out of balance of our traditional political system throws out of balance also the lives of all Americans."

It is said that the President himself has not read, or had not read up to two days ago, the text of the truly incredible work-relief bill which has been rushed into Congress without hearings and is now in process of being railroaded through the House. Amazing as the oversight appears, one may hope that it is true. For it requires no more than a single reading of this bill as drafted to arouse conviction—absolute conviction—that it is one of the sloppiest and most dangerous pieces of legislation ever presented to any legislative body with any claim to competence for the task of government. Senator Couzens is scarcely guilty of overstatement in saying that the man who drafted it "ought to be hung." He probably would be, if the American people really valued their traditions.

Here is a bill, introduced on the heels of the Supreme Court's unanimous opinion demanding that Congress must take its constitutional responsibilities seriously, which might reasonably be followed by further legislation closing Congress as Hitler closed the Reichstag.

It is not merely that the pending "Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935" turns over to the President a total of nearly $5,000,000,000 to do with as he chooses. It is not merely that the bill gives authority to make appointments under this huge fund "without regard to the provisions of the civil service laws" and to fix compensation of job-holders "without regard to the Classification Act." It is not even that this bill would authorize the President to punish with fine or imprisonment, or both, any violation of any regulation he may decide to make to carry out its purposes.

All of these, and other, clauses of the bill are staggering. But the gravest indictment of all is that the purposes of this unprecedented bill are not even stated in such a way that anybody can have any clear idea of what the program is for which the constitutional prerogatives of Congress are to be butchered. Both Mussolini and Hitler at least paid their legislatures the courtesy of defining the executive program before they asked the traditional lawmakers to shut up shop.

This is not a question of the desirability of work-relief. It is not a question of the prevention of suffering and misery by action of the Federal Government. It is not a question of the amount of money to be spent for that end. It is simply a question of whether or not Congress is going to abdicate to the Executive. And its pending abdication is certainly not made more dignified by the assertion that the President has not troubled to read the legislation by which Congress is asked to sign its death warrant.

"What is proposed," as the American Liberty League pointed out the other day, "is that the President shall have power to decide all the different questions of policy arising in connection with an expenditure of an amount of money equal to the total annual costs of the Government at the beginning of the depression."

That is unquestionably understatement. What is proposed is in effect that Congress abdicate and turn the Government over to a modern version of the Praetorian Guard. The Senate, remembering what that policy meant for the Roman body from which its name is taken, will perhaps give this incredible legislation something of the intelligent attention which the House has denied.

John Barton Payne.

Something other than vainglory suggests that the peacetime organization of the Red Cross represents a peculiarly American concept of the individual's obligation to his stricken fellow. The institution is seen today as an outstanding characteristic of the Nation, universally known and universally respected. For its high development, acknowledgment is due the devotion and ability of John Barton Payne, its chairman, who died yesterday.

By a coincidence, his passing marks the end of a phase in the working out of American civilization. For at the very moment when he is mourned, the country opens debate on a new social security program whereby the Government seeks, to a great extent, to supplant private initiative in the alleviation of misery and the bulwarking of insecurity. The wisdom of such an all-inclusive swing from private to public responsibility is questioned by many. But the underlying principle is overwhelmingly accepted and a general broadening of outlook is indicated thereby.

It was such a breadth of vision, coupled with an executive genius, that developed the Red Cross organization to its present peak. To Judge Payne and his associates the Nation has turned in almost numberless emergencies. Over and above these more dramatic achievements, the Red Cross renders an incalculable service in its daily ministrations to a sorely-pressed people. Without the energy and loyalty of Judge Payne, little of this would have been possible. In his death the forces of humanity lose a champion who represented the old order at its best.

Galloping Imagination.

Leaving the realistic field of agriculture, where he has encountered far more problems than he has solved, Secretary Wallace has taken a wild fling in political extravaganza. His proposal that supreme governmental powers be conferred upon a council of commissars reads like the dream of a movie impresario. Yet this fantastic political philosophy, which he offers in the current issue of Collier's, seems to be no less sincere than it is naive.

Mr. Wallace has conducted a number of experiments in what he calls "economic democracy." Farmers have been asked whether they approve curtailment of cotton and other crops. With their minds fixed upon higher prices, immediate profits and benefit payments, large majorities have replied in the affirmative. Mr. Wallace admits that, as a result of this makeshift planning, the United States may be losing its export market for cotton. Yet he is so charmed by the underlying idea that he would superimpose it upon our entire governmental system.

To make the popular will on any subject immediately effective Mr. Wallace would set up a council of four eminent citizens "as revered and trusted as the Supreme Court." The council would serve as a planning board, formulating national economic policies. It would be given power to override opposition by appealing directly to the people for support of its measures. Proposals thus ratified by national referenda would automatically become amendments to the Constitution and the Supreme Court would have no power to invalidate them.

For example, the Townsend plan would need only the approval of Mr. Wallace's council and a modicum of propaganda behind it to inaugurate the wreckage of our economic system. The President, Congress and the courts would all be powerless to interfere.

Secretary Wallace must realize that what he is really advocating is destruction of the American system of government. His purpose is "to cut through to the common sense of the people, see what they want to do, and express that purpose in a continuing policy on which we can stand and go down the years, regardless of party, or class, or region." He has simplified the problem of governing a highly complex nation with sophomoric generalities. The lessons of history and most of the achievements during hundreds of years of political evolution would be swept recklessly into discard to make way for a flimsy improvisation that would exalt expediency and popular whim over all responsible judgment.

If such a proposal came from a private citizen, it would be listed among the myriad half-baked nostrums that the depression has wrung from a distracted people. But coming from a member of the Cabinet, this muddled thinking can not be lightly dismissed. When Secretary Wallace frankly admits that official "noses are being rubbed into hard facts," when he recognizes that some agencies of the New Deal are working at cross purposes, there is a strong inclination to look to him for constructive suggestions. But his awakening to past blunders is accompanied by such grossly distorted reasoning that the net effect of his counsel is to arouse fresh apprehension.

Mr. Wallace's indulgence may be explained by the French proverb: "The imagination gallops, judgment goes on foot." Yet the Administration can not expect the public entirely to dissociate such irresponsible advice by a Cabinet member from the legislative program which it is seeking to have enacted.

Announcement is made of a new "foolproof" explosive which can not be set off by heavy hammers, or red hot drills, or blow torches, or furnace fires, or any other device than a dynamite cartridge. This overlooks the possibility of a couple of ministers of foreign affairs or a demented young patriot with a revolver.

Farmers' Credit Good.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

Northern California farmers have given a striking demonstration that their credit is good. The Regional Agricultural Credit Association, an agency of the Farm Credit Administration, reports that crop loans advanced in the depth of the depression of 1933 have been repaid up to 99.2 per cent.

The total amount advanced for this purpose was $5,088,740 of which $5,051,112 was repaid as of December 20 of this year. The balance is less than 1 per cent of the total amount of credit advanced.

Crop loans are self-liquidating—that is when the crop can be sold. The fine showing made is not only a tribute to the farmers' financial responsibility, but it also indicates that the farmers have not been getting red

Letters To The Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Another Juvenile Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many letters and articles of comment, praise and criticism regarding the practices of the local Juvenile Court have been published in The Post, most of which I have read with much interest and appreciation. I would like to offer my opinion.

My boy was haled before this same court on a similar charge, that of taking a ride in a car owned by someone he did not know. I, with counsel, was present at this so-called trial for the purpose of bringing to the Court's attention the background of my son, also to present my plans to better his living conditions and finally, to ask the Court's indulgence until I could bring this about. What did the Court do?

Why, Judge Bentley admitted nothing but incriminating evidence. Nothing I or my counsel could say was permitted. Before the case had hardly started, at least in my opinion, I was shocked when these words were uttered by the Court: "I sentence this boy to the National Training School for Boys until he is 21 years of age." I will never in all my life quite forget those words.

My boy was not as fortunate as many others who have a family car, or one of an acquaintance, with which to manifest his driving desire. I was doing everything in my power to buy one for him, because I knew his overwhelming infatuation for an automobile. My contention is, by probating him until we could have bought a car, be it ever so humble, the boy would now be at home and in school minus the stigma of being sent to a training school.

Surely most men, who have been normal boys and had that urge and anxiety to drive an automobile can appreciate the boy's position, also mine when I was trying to guide my son's career through the age when this desire is most acute.

As the parent of an actual victim of the railroading (nothing short of it) methods of Judge Bentley, I hereby register my objections to any person holding that office who lacks knowledge of boy nature, as is demonstrated by our case as well as the present two and many more I have heard of. A judge, in my opinion, should know more than mere law.

Incidentally I have visited my son at the National Training School and have no complaints to offer against the school, personnel or methods except that they conduct no high school classes.

MRS. MAYME DAVIS DEWEY.
Washington, Jan. 23.

Full Facts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On picking up the paper this morning I was nauseated to see the attacks made by readers upon the action of Judge Bentley. Futhermore, I was astounded by the appalling ignorance of the sob-sisters who wrote the letters. To enlighten the reading public in this regard, therefore, would seem to be in order.

First, it appears to be the general impression that the lads have against them no previous record of juvenile delinquency. I quote the following, with which Judge Bentley was well acquainted:

"Arthur Penn has a long previous record. In 1931, when he was only about 11 years old, this boy was involved in a series of misdemeanors. In almost every case he was with one or more other boys. Official records show that one of these misdemeanors involved the theft of $48 from a dry-cleaning company, another the theft of $15, another $1.40, another the theft of a pocketbook, another breaking and entering private property, another the theft of $8.50, another $22, and finally, disorderly conduct in the Zoo Park."

Second, the boys were not sentenced to six years, as most people seem to believe. They were committed to the National Training School for the period of their minority, which is the only length of time the judge could legally give them. She could not have committed them for two years, or one year, or six months. When boys are sent to the Training School for their minority, they usually stay no longer than 18 months; never have they remained longer than 20 months.

Third, some assert that the institution in question is not conducive to the making of good character. If this be true, then it's up to the District of Columbia to provide a suitable place. Judge Bentley could send them nowhere else.

Personally, I prefer to give my sympathy to the law-abiding citizens of Washington whose property may fall into the clutches of vandals. Since the people of our city evidently believe in patting joy-riders on the back, then I'm thankful I have no automobile to leave on the street at night. I advise the rest of you to lock your cars up in garages from now on.

Unemployment Data.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why is it that with all the bureaus prevalent throughout Washington they can not accurately give out information in regard to the unemployment situation? Why should not the present Congress establish an agency to deal with this particular problem?

The establishment of such an agency to keep tabs on the unemployment situation is, beyond question, not debatable. Its establishment should be begun at once. Such an agency would be invaluable to the Federal Government in determining the ranks of the unemployed. WILLIAM J. BROUN.

The Liberty League And NRA

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial in The Post of January 22, relative to the position of the American Liberty League on the NRA, seems to imply a rather usual misconception of the league's purposes.

The function of the league as conceived by its executive committee is to stand guard against certain tendencies which are viewed as departures from constitutional principles. In urging the preservation of constitutional principles there can be no inconsistency in a practical application which takes account of the needs and welfare of American business.

In the case of the NRA, legislation becomes necessary because of the approaching expiration of the present law. The league does not condemn the NRA outright. It recognizes that some of its activities may be of benefit to both industry and the general public, provided they are kept within proper bounds in the light of the basic theories of our Government. The league realizes that policies of the NRA are still in a process of development and that the best minds of its administrative organization as well as outside authorities have been unable to reach definite decisions as to a future course.

Believing that more time must elapse before there can be a basis for an intelligent opinion, the league objects to the enactment of permanent legislation, but holds that any extension of the unusual authority vested in the President by the national industrial recovery act should be for a definitely limited period. The league is not urging a continuance of the NRA but merely argues that, if it is to be continued, it should be for a further trial period.

The league does not attempt at this time to make positive commitments upon all the controversial points. Its pamphlet was not intended to be "vigorously constructive." It was in large part factual, being designed to furnish the high lights of the activities of the NRA. As The Post knows, there has been an entire lack of official data on its operations. The NRA is not required to make an annual report and it has not volunteered to do so.

To make the position of the league plainer as to self-government by industry let us put it in this way: If codes are to be continued each industry should have the privilege of formulating a code only where a clear majority of the industry favors such action, but when a code is thus formulated the minority as well as the majority must comply.

Very truly yours,
JOUETT SHOUSE,
President, American Liberty League.
Washington, Jan. 24.

Progress Bowls Cyrus Over.

It's pretty tough on so outstanding a figure as Cyrus the Great for the Persians to give up the name he gave them and go back to the ancient name Iran, as they will do on March 22. Cyrus was King of Persia, a small part—maybe one-fifth—of present-day Persia, who welded together all the tribes on the Iranian plateau, took the title King of the Persians—and much of all the rest of the then known world—and made his nation the foremost people. From then on one had to be an inhabitant of Persis to be a ruler of the empire.

This is not the reason given, however, for the announced change. Persian is not inclusive enough. It is as if all the American people were called Yankees, the Italians Piedmontese or the Germans Prussians. The Iranian dog objects to being wagged by the Persian tail.

It rankles with people to be reminded of their defeats and humiliations. Agincourt, Moscow, Waterloo, Valley Forge, Gettysburg, Nicaragua and Haiti, Caporetto, the Marne, Shanghai are good names to forget. Perhaps peace would be easier if they could be dropped from the vocabulary. Anyway, the Near East is coming out of its long inertia to play a bigger part in history and Iran may mark the beginning of another great day in the life of the Iranians.

The Post Impressionist

Yesterday's Wild Women.

Post Office, Friday.

"HE was the husband of Miss Vesta Tilley, who nursed him with unwearied devotion in his last illness."

This is almost all that the London Times has to say of Sir Walter de Frece in its obituary notice of him. "He was formerly . . . a member of Parliament." If it's not much to say, perhaps there wasn't much more to be said.

The significant fact is that the obituary notice identifies Sir Walter by his wife. And the significant query thus raised is:

How many of the notice's American readers can identify Vesta Tilley?

How many American theatergoers—now so largely movie-goers—can, for the matter of that, identify Marie Lloyd? Or, for the matter of that, Eva Tanguay and Minnie Renwood?

Yet, all this quartet of music-hall stars in England, vaudeville headliners in the United States, were a Fearful Fascination to the young bloods of the late nineties and the early nineteen hundreds. Harold, should your modern hardihood inquire of your father whether he knew one of them personally——

(What's this? We mean "grandfather"? We don't—but, if you prefer, grandfather, then!)

——should you demand of your grandfather whether he ever knew any of them personally, you would probably summon to his parchment cheeks the faint ghost of a 30-years-old blush.

Vesta Tilley!

Why, she shocked—and attracted—our growing-up brother: shocked him when he admitted to our parents that he had seen her performance; attracted him when he bragged to his friends that he had seen it.

She came over here with an English reputation—or notoriety. What's more, here she increased it. She "appeared" (that was the word then) at—was it Koster & Bial's in New York, or Weber & Field's?

And the reason for the shock was the reason for the fascination:

She was a "male impersonator."

Too true!

She not only wore a man's hat, coat and waistcoat. She wore trousers—"pants" they were then.

Yes, sir! She impersonated a man by wearing a plum-colored silk-hat, a pale blue dress-coat, a buff waistcoat (American: "vest") and buff trousers. What's more, she carried a cane, not to say twirled it, and she smoked a cigarette.

Right out on the stage, she did.

Why, our big brother said——

But, looking backward from the vantage point of 1935, we don't feel that it greatly matters what our big brother said in—in the sufficiently distant year in which he said it.

You see, we never saw Vesta Tilley off the stage—saw her only once upon it. And it's quite possible that we have confused Vesta Tilley with Vesta Victoria. But, anyway, we did know, on and off, her immediate successor and outshocking shocker, Marie Lloyd.

Vesta Tilley was described by her critics as singing "a certain kind of song." She ought to have heard (though she would probably have refused to listen) the songs Marie Lloyd sang! The latter's critics said that her songs were "positively ambiguous." This is odd, because we can't remember a line from any of them. But we do remember that, when he heard we knew her, a Surrey fox-hunting squire just about cut us.

He wouldn't believe her only drink was a pint of bitter after the show; that, when she went to a rare party, she left—alone—before 2 a. m. He wouldn't believe that she inhabited a flat in—yes, in Bloomsbury; that the flat's other occupant was her old-maid aunt from Wales, that Marie always liked to do the cooking, generally did it and mostly washed the dishes, too.

Now, we don't contend that one can't drink and drink bitter and be a villain still. We know that some blondes leave parties early in order to be blonde bandits between 2 a. m. and dawn. Perhaps there are a few adventuresses in Bloomsbury. An old-maid aunt ought to show her birth certificate if she wants to be accepted as such. And devotion to the culinary art is no proof of rectitude: there have been excellent cooks who put arsenic in the onions.

But, although washing dishes is scarcely a virtue, a persistence in washing dishes when you've got even an alleged maiden aunt around to wish the job on, is——

Well, it's simply incompatible with vice.

The friend of a friend of ours sums up these wild women of other days. He knows a former burlesque queen.

Says he:

"This former burlesque queen says she wouldn't lower herself to go to some of the shows they put on nowadays. She says:

"'In my time, we wore tights!'"

Latin-American Trade Spurs Industrial Race

Three Continents Vie For Plums, Boosting Southern Nations Into Prominence.

By Paul Vanorden Shaw.
(Special Correspondence of The Post).

THE tense and hectic struggle for Latin-American trade moved into the stop-watch stage late last summer. When an American flying palace cut six minutes on its inaugural trip from the city of Buenos Aires to Porto Alegre, there was much rejoicing on the part of those who represent North American interests in this three-cornered duel for Latin America's trade favors.

Three continents are in the fight. In the Far East, Japan is the outstanding contender. Europe is represented by several nations actively engaged in the struggle; Germany, England, France, Italy and Russia compete with each other even as they compete with the United States and Japan.

The Latin Americans are in the enviable position of being able to do their shopping at home. It's even unnecessary for them to telephone their orders to the shops of the world. As a matter of fact, their greatest difficulty is to keep from being bowled over by the mad rush of salesmen and from being drowned by a very deluge of samples and goods brought to their door.

They are subjected also to a veritable barrage of sales talks which are not limited solely to descriptions of the virtues of the commodities which they have to sell but extend to the vices and faults of their various competitors. In any event this puts the Latin Americans in a strategic position where they can choose from the world's offerings with practically no expense to themselves and with none of the discomfort incident to shopping in the crowded markets beyond the seas.

* * * *

THIS gives the Latin Americans, however, a commercial and diplomatic importance in the world which has passed by unperceived by many observers and writers on world affairs. In a very real sense the Latin American continent has become the pendulum to the world's clock, and it is reasonable to suspect that many policies and activities in the Far East or in Europe may be traceable to events in the Latin American world.

The outward expressions of this trade fight are in the field of transportation. British, French and Italian fliers have blazed trails from their respective homelands down to Africa and across the South Atlantic in the hopes of competing successfully with the monotonously regular commutation trips of the Graf Zeppelin, the spearhead of Germany's Latin American trade thrust. We North Americans have speeded up the schedules of our vast network of airways and applied our inventive genius to developing flying passenger and freight leviathans of the air.

The immediate result of this competition along the airways has been to bring Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro closer to New York, London, Paris and Berlin than New York is, or was until recently to San Francisco. The cultural and diplomatic consequences of this fact may far exceed in importance the commercial relationships which they are intended to build up.

North Americans and Europeans have stressed speed, service and the time element in their frantic efforts to capture, recapture or maintain their Latin American trade. Hopelessly outclassed in the matter of time, Japan has resorted to a different technique.

* * * *

EVERY visitor to Latin-American ports will recall having seen one or more of Japan's neat and trim freight and passenger boats, which ply not only between Latin America and Japan, but also between the ports of Latin America and those belonging to Japanese commercial rivals. Until recently, and this still may be true, the only way in which an American could go from New Orleans to Rio or Buenos Aires was on a Japanese boat, and because the fares were so alluring, as compared with others between those South American ports and New York City, many an American has preferred to use the Japanese lines in preference to his own. Japan, however, does not have merely an excellent shipping service. She has developed a commercial service and technique which is responsible for a great deal of her amazing success in the last two years.

It is in the field of prices, however, that Japan has been able to overcome the time element and to sell her goods when other nations could deliver much sooner.

The fight is on. Millions of dollars are being invested in order to capture Latin America's trade, commercial and reciprocity treaties are being signed, good-will missions tax the capacities of ships and hotels and the agencies of propaganda are running night and day. But one wonders if the cost has been counted.

Undoubtedly the present trade of Latin America is of great importance. The value of this trade will increase, but it is doubtful whether the potential markets which the rivals for Latin-American trade are now seeking will live up to their expectations in the near future. The masses of Latin Americans are illiterate, live in rural communities still untapped by railroads, and in many cases are Indians who may never come to adopt European customs and costumes. The sum total population of Latin America probably does not exceed the population of the United States, and the purchasing power of the former will not equal that of the latter for many generations to come.

* * * *

THUS it would seem that a realistic attitude would suggest that the second-saving efforts and the enormous investments in time and money may not be entirely justified by the potential profits visible in the immediate future. The gains for the world, however, may be most significant along lines which have already been hinted at. Latin America, which has been brought from "the fringes of international life" into its very heart, may be able to exercise an influence in the interests of world peace thus far not vouchsafed any other nation or group of nations in these intensely dramatic times.

It is the very passivity of their role in this trade drama which strengthens their hand. Due to these international rivalries, each of the Latin-American nations achieves a position of influence and power far greater than is justified by its size, wealth or military strength. The massed influence of all the Latin-American countries is even today a steadying influence in world affairs. That is the most hopeful and constructive result of the wild scramble for their trade.

Elmer Twitchell on Taxes.

"I can remember," said Elmer Twitchell today, "away back when I used to throw a fit over taxes. It seems like yesterday when I'd fly off the handle, kick the dog, denounce our lawmakers and fight with the family every time a tax blank arrived, but I've got accustomed to it now and a few extra tax notices a day don't fluster me a bit.

* * * *

"In fact, if the letter man passes the house without leavin' a couple of new forms, I'm a little resentful. I reckon I've been hit by so many taxes that I'm numb all over and can't feel 'em like used to.

* * * *

"There was a time, back before the broader life, when just the Government income tax made me see red every time it came time to pay it, and I used to take a narcotic so I wouldn't feel the pain. But now with a State income tax on top of the U. S. tax, a city tax on top of the State tax and three or four dozen other assorted taxes on top of 'em all, I've just resigned myself to life under a vacuum cleaner.

* * * *

"With this here broader taxation and the broader life, I've just put a broader mail slot in my front door and acquired a broader attitude toward being skinned, dressed and hung out with the rest of the carcasses. I'm getting a break that there ain't no processing tax on me in the bargain.

* * * *

"There's such a thing as making out so many tax forms that you become an addict. That's me. I've got so I can't go more than two or three days without 'em. Last week I felt low and terrible, and I didn't know just what was the matter. But the wife realized what was wrong right away. She handed me a slip of paper with a lot of questions like, 'What was your income from other sources?' 'Were you married and living with your wife during the last fiscal year?' and I recovered at once.

Carlisle Bargeron

Suspicious Business.

IT is unfortunate for an intelligent understanding of the implications of the bill and as to what perhaps were some of the underlying motives of its sponsors that the House revolt against the $4,000,000,000 building program should have been associated with the greed of members for rivers and harbors projects and their enmity toward Mr. Ickes because he has been stingy with his patronage.

BARGERON.

The inevitable public reaction is to consider that the Administration is right, that patronage and pork barrel politics are again interfering with the public weal in time of stress. Such a reaction can only bolster the Administration's standing. Very likely many Congressmen have received telegrams insisting they stand by the President in his great humanitarian effort to put people to work. After all, it is called a great humanitarian bill. Its preamble mouths a lot about alleviating human distress. Nobody can be against a bill like that.

* * * *

And it is a fact, too, that patronage objections to Mr. Ickes and a desire for pork barrel rivers and harbors projects are what motivated the revolters. However, it is one time we can thank the stars for the baser motives of men.

Observers hereabouts, friendly toward the Administration and critical, are agreed that in its original form it was the most amazing bill ever to be handed to Congress. It is idle to deny that even now the President can, under its terms, do just about anything he sees fit, but originally there were provisions which should cause us to wonder what in the name of goodness his crowd has in mind. Probably the most ridiculous thing in it is the concluding provision:

"A report of the obligations incurred under this appropriation shall be submitted to each of the next three regular sessions of Congress before the 10th day of January."

This is such a feeble effort of the House to retain its dignity and sense of importance as to be downright laughable.

* * * *

Under the bill as the House leaders and the Administration insisted upon it, however, the President could have issued a regulation for which a man could be sentenced to two years imprisonment for violating it, he could have abolished every governmental department in Washington, or reorganized it as he saw fit, he could have taken over any business or industry, and particularly the power interests, in the country.

What few, if any, have been able to dope out yet is why he wants the right of eminent domain over personal property as well as real. This means, of course, that the Administration could take over Andy Mellon's diamond rings, or more apt, his paintings.

* * * *

The revolt resulted in these particularly objectionable features being taken out, although every effort will likely be made to have them restored in the Senate. And the defenders of the bill will say that it is absurd to think the Administration really intends to take over Andy's paintings or to abolish the Government departments. And it is.

But there was another provision that was plain subterfuge. It would have permitted the Administration to extend the NRA without any further legislation, without Congress being told what form it was to be extended in or anything else. Indeed, it is amazing how little Congress has been told about the bill at all. A charitable thought is that the Administration has only a vague notion of what it intends to do with the bill itself. Nothwithstanding it was claimed plans were ready for projects to be carried out in the bill, Mr. Ickes only a few days ago wrote the State Governors telling them to look around and get up some stuff for the spending.

One thing does seem clear and that is the Administration wants the authority. What it wants it for, no one knows. Mr. Roosevelt laughingly said he hadn't read the bill. He said this once before, in the last session, when congressional leaders told him a particular bill went decidedly too far. Maybe he ought to read them. This pending bill wouldn't take more than two minutes.

And in the meantime, it would be more comforting if Congress was more concerned in the repeated apparent attempts to put something over than in patronage or rivers and harbors projects.

No End Of Books

Erskine Caldwell's 'Journeyman' Tells Of Rogue Preacher Among Georgia Countrymen.

By Theodore Hall.

ERSKINE CALDWELL has boiled down his Georgia hinterland farther than ever in his latest novel, "Journeyman" (Viking Press, $4.75, limited edition of 1,475 copies). With thousands of readers familiar with old Ty Ty Walden of "God's Little Acre" (out for some time now in the Modern Library) and thousands of theatergoers pleased, appalled, but at least impressed by the Jeeters in "Tobacco Road," the Caldwell country has found a definite place on the literary map. Yet, he staked, developed and worked this claim in less than six years of writing.

Mr. Caldwell did not do this by a mere boldness in presenting his backward, illiterate, dusty, lusty characters. It would be useless to deny, of course, that the shock is there for many readers. But that shock comes from a certain provincialism in us which declines to allow other people to have other mores. Not concerned with that "allowing," Mr. Caldwell's writing hand goes on to present his scene and the life natural to it. That he does this with undeviating objectivity, with an extraordinary economy of means for the effect produced, and with a complete sense for harmony within the frame, marks him as perhaps the best poised and most talented of our younger writers.

All these qualities which distinguished his earlier work have been distilled in "Journeyman."

* * * *

It is the story—drawling-slow at first, then sharp, swift and compact—of the traveling lay preacher, who stops for a few days at a red-dirt farm. Long, gaunt, persuasive-spoken Semon Dye is a picturesque chaser of the devil. "I know just about every sin there is in Georgia—and then some!" he cries to Clay Horey, his host. Clay is fascinated, then somewhat rebellious when he finds how conspicuously true this is.

For Semon turns to be a sort of cracker-country Elmer Gantry. Nothing he rails against, professionally, but he does himself with an aplomb which hypnotizes Clay, his young wife, the neighbors and all. Pushing like the camel into the tent Semon cajoles, threatens, deceives—and generally takes what he wants among the simple people of Rocky Comfort. It is an unpleasant sequence of hypocrisy, to be sure, but Mr. Caldwell makes it intensely vivid and plausible.

* * * *

One scene in particular will show the simplicity of these countrymen when they face a thorough rascal like Semon. The preacher has lured Clay into some crap shooting—save the mark, but Semon is like that!—and before its half-comic, half-tragic action is over the preacher has skillfully won Clay's old watch, his automobile, and his wife. Naturally Clay is peeved, and there's some scuffling and gun play, but Semon holds the upper hand and Clay has to borrow $100 on his next year's crop to regain his chattels.

And then, as an example of another kind of simplicity, there is the curious chapter in which Semon and Clay find Tom Rhodes, a neighbor, sitting in his cowshed and looking out through a slit in the back wall. Just that. He's a bit embarrassed, and then he explains:

"There's not a single thing to see," he says, "and then again there's the whole world to look at. Looking through the side of the shed ain't like anything else I can think of. You sit there a while and the first thing you know you can't get away from it. It gets a hold on a man like nothing else does. You sit there, screwing up your eye and looking at the trees or something, and you might start to thinking what a fool thing you're doing, but you don't give a cuss about that. All you care for is staying there and looking."

And then, sharing a jug of corn, the three of them take turns looking through the slit, awed and trancelike.

The power of suggestion comes to the fore in the revival scene. No compunction for any of his knavery stops Semon. With everyone for miles around crowded into the schoolhouse, he turns loose his battery of exhortation and there occurs a frenzied, orgiastic, primitive tumult which can have few parallels in American writing.

And when it is all over, and the preacher leaves, Clay remarks with a strange poignancy:

"Semon was a sort of low-down scoundrel, taking all in all, but he had a way with him just the same. I couldn't put up with a rascal like him very long, because I'd sooner or later go get my shotgun and blast away at him. But it does sort of leave a hollow feeling inside of me to know he ain't here no longer. I feel left high and dry, like a turtle on its back that can't turn over."

Mr. Caldwell may write of elemental people. But by the power of his scrupulous craftsmanship he sets up a high and valid excitement. Many a reader, finishing "Journeyman," will feel "high and dry"—and a little wan, too.

Light Reading

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

THERE is, as there ought to be, a steady demand for novels whose main purpose is entertainment; such novels should amuse and divert the mind, and at the same time should be so well written as to appeal to good taste and one's intellectual self-respect. Furthermore, there are times when a convalescent is not yet able to walk abroad, but is able to read; and I am constantly asked to make out prescriptions of reading best fitted for such cases. For just as reading in bed is a better preparation for sleep than drugs or alcohol, so good reading is better medicine for convalescents than pills.

* * * *

I was therefore very glad to print last week a list of novels prepared by an intelligent correspondent; and now I add to this list some choices of my own:

"Storm Music," "Adele & Co."—Dornford Yates.

"Come Out of the Pantry"—Alice Duer Miller.

"Lose With a Smile"—Ring Lardner.

"For Days' Wonder"—A. A. Milne.

"L'Affaire Jones"—H. Bernstein.

"Leave It to Psmith," and anything and everything else by P. G. Wodehouse.

"Bird of Dawning"—John Masefield.

"The Free Fishers"—John Buchan.

In an agreeable conversation I had with Mr. Buchan, he told me that the "Free Fishers" is a regular active organization and that the horsemanship in this novel, coach-driving, etc., are absolutely accurate.

Townsend Plan Calls For Simpler Answers

Fallacy In Trying To Distribute Non-Existent Wealth Needs Explanation.

By Elliott Thurston.

ATTEMPTS to explain why the Townsend plan would fail continue to be highly ineffective. The dream of elderly affluence keeps on spreading. Letters continue to pour into Congress and into newspaper offices, demanding this particular route to Utopia.

Many of the writers are impatient and indignant. They complain, justly, that the plan is ridiculed, but that they are not shown why it will not work. Doubtless many of the millions who have so far been taken in by the country doctor and his missionaries do not want to hear why the plan will not work. Doubtless many would not understand the economic arguments against it. However, this is partly because economists as a class have so little aptitude for saying things understandably.

It seems evident that the plan can not be stopped by ridicule. Arguments rather than adjectives will have to be hurled against it. It does no good to say, as Harry Hopkins, relief administrator, does, that the plan is "cock-eyed." Many others, like him, are trying to laugh it off—and it won't be laughed off. Reporters, public men and others who have attended typical meetings of the Townsend clubs, which are springing up all over the land, all agree that nobody is effectively exposing the fallacies of the plan, while its proponents go on day after day winning more and more easy converts.

Dr. Townsend appeared yesterday before a large audience at a luncheon in the auditorium of the National Press Club. Before him were newspaper correspondents, public officials, lawyers, economists—altogether a group of men of more than average experience in and knowledge of public affairs. They proved singularly ineffectual in showing up the country doctor. Many of the audience concluded that Dr. Townsend was a sincere but simple soul with whom it would be useless to argue. He can never be brought up face to face with an economic fact. Such few efforts as were made to bring the doctor down to reality were rather feeble and frustrated by the doctor's easy retreat into his dream world.

* * * *

MOREOVER many of the doctor's disciples do not want to be brought down out of the clouds. They resent it. They want to be told that the plan will work—not that it won't work. Yet from the letters coming into newspaper editors, it seems evident that a large number of the writers do want enlightenment. They are annoyed by mere invective or ridicule.

Is it possible for the economists to say in plain words, which can be understood by average men and women, why the plan is "fantastic" and "cock-eyed?" Certainly this writer is not going to try to offer the complete answer—but only to suggest that the answer should and must be made simple enough to be grasped by the large number of reasonably intelligent men and women who manifestly do not see what is wrong with the doctor's scheme, but want to find out.

And the answer, it seems to this side-line observer, must discard mere adjectives and assemble the arguments. It should be possible to make clearly understandable the fact that there is nothing in the doctor's plan to increase the national wealth and that by no possible redistribution of the existing or prospective national wealth would it be possible to give one class of aging people so large a share as Dr. Townsend proposes to give them without at the same time causing utter disaster for all classes.

* * * *

THE doctor would pay $200 a month to every one of 60 years of age or older, rich and poor alike. He thus proposes to give $24,000,000,000 a year to about one-eighth of the population for doing nothing except spend the money. They would not only create no new wealth, but they would be explicitly prohibited from creating it. All that would have happened, assuming the plan could be put into operation at all, would be that the rest of the population would have been taxed to pay more than half of the national income to a class of idle pensioners.

Last year the national income was around $45,000,000,000. If that were divided equally among the 125,000,000 of the population, old and young, it would give everybody exactly $360. Even if business revival were back to 1929 levels, and enough new wealth and national income were created to double the total of last year, it would still give everybody only $720 a year if divided up.

But Dr. Townsend proposes to give $2,400 a year to everybody in one preferred and pensioned group. If half of the national income or even one-quarter of it is to be extracted from everybody else to be paid over to the favored group for doing nothing, the results would, in fact, be cock-eyed. If there were not early rebellion, if there were not actual contraction instead of expansion of the national wealth and the national income, there would be sure to be a runaway of prices, caused by the doctor's pyramided turnover tax and by his own theory of demand far outrunning supply. The $200 a month pension might then be worth even less in buying power than the $30 a month contemplated by the New Deal old-age pension program.

AS has been emphasized before, if $200 a month paid to each of 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 persons for doing nothing will produce the good results predicted by the doctor and his disciples, why not double or triple the amount of the pensions and the number of the pensioners and so multiply the benefits?

The real fallacy of the plan lies in the answer to that question—which the doctor dodges. The millions of trusting men and women whose hopes have been pathetically aroused deserve to be told—those who want to be told—why they are being made victims of a cruel mirage. Surely it ought to be possible to make widely understandable the simple truth that far more wealth than exists or is in reasonable prospect has to be created in order to divide it up as the doctor proposes. He has no prescription for creating more wealth. He would only shift what exists or is in sight to an upper age class at the expense of everybody else. That could not possibly work because there is not that much wealth or anywhere near that much wealth to take from seven-eighths of the people to be given to one-eighth. Dollars are but evidences of wealth. When they cease to be that they are worthless.

Neither the evidently sincere doctor nor anybody else can divide up, as he proposes, what does not exist.

Charles Jackson Critically Burned at Millville.

Millville, W. Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Charles Jackson, 32, of Chestnut Hill, W. Va., is in the Charles Town General Hospital in Charles Town in a critical condition from burns suffered by him while at work in the Standard Limestone plant here Tuesday night.

Mr. Jackson, the father of five children, suffered serious burns on the left leg, on both hands and arms as far as the elbows, and his face and neck. His threat was so badly burned that doctors at first thought an operation would be necessary to open the breathing passes.

San Quentin, Calif., Jan. 24 (AP).—Discovery of a loaded revolver hidden in a wall in San Quentin Prison started another rigid investigation tonight on the heels of an inquiry into the recent ill-fated break for freedom by four convicts.

At the same time acting Warden Julian H. Alco said a special guard crew was continuously searching the crowded prison and generally gleaned a handful of crudely fashioned knives each week. He declared the gun had nothing to do with last week's break.

National Farce Centers About Bookies, Bets

By Nelson B. Bell.

"Three Men on a Horse," that current riot of abdominal guffaws and horse betting atmosphere so realistic that one almost expects Maj. Brown's minions to burst into the National at any performance with a cry of "Surprise, surprise, it's a raid!" is living proof of the impossiblity of trying to judge the merits of a play—especially a farce—from its manuscript.

The writer does not happen to have perused the MS. of the mirth-quake for which Messrs. John Cecil Holm and George Abbott are responsible, but the due reflection and careful consideration always the aftermath of witnessing a smash hit has convinced us that in reading form, the opus probably was a very innocuous piece indeed.

The sting of the play, the deep-rooted laughs it provokes, are not, as has been the case with so many plays of the sports world—such as "Is Zat So" and others of its ilk—attributable to any superficial cleverness usually dignified with the title of "wisecracks." There is very little of the college humor type of laugh extracting in the play.

He Meets Horse Player.

Rather are the snickers, chuckles and howls evoked in a more satisfactory and lasting form known as "humor of situation." With the possible exception of a few crackling lines, the appeal of the play hinges on the exceedingly ludicrous situations into which young Erwin Trowbridge, a greeting card versifier, stumbles when thrown into intimate contact with three dyed-in-the-wool racketeer horse players.

When Erwin's contact becomes too intimate toward the close of the play when he is suspected of double crossing those whose bankroll he had rehabilitated from $12 to $11,000, the humor becomes even more riotous.

We reiterate, that such humor and action as take place on the stage as the three men are being enacted upon their horse, would be pretty dull fare in the printed word. But, under the skillful emoting of a well-nigh perfect cast, they become a thing of beauty and a joy forever (or at least as long as the opus remains on the boards and while it is serving its tenure as a gelatinized draymah).

Sam Lavene, Gambler.

William Lynn as the hapless coiner of card verses a delightfully browbeaten and at the same time rebellious characterization to the proceedings. Shirley Booth as the Mabel of easy virtue and twittery mind brings to life in a refreshing manner the character allotted to her. Patsy, as portrayed by Sam Levene, is the almost exact counterpart of thousands of his ilk who frequent bookmaking headquarters, race tracks and—when the Goddess of Chance smiles—our better night clubs and theaters.

Having the vision to see how the characters described by the probably drab printed word could be brought to life in such a satisfactory manner is a credit to the producers—or maybe its plain luck. Better men than the producers of "Three Men on a Horse" have had better manuscripts than the current attraction at the National—and have given forth productions that are best described in the Broadway argot as "Turkeys."

Anyway, the financial sponsors, who reputedly are the Messrs. Warner of film fame, could afford to take a chance. Unless my Dun and Bradstreet misinforms me grossly, the Warner Brothers are among the few in the country who can afford the extravagance of hatching out plays that might either grow up to be "Turkeys" or smash hits.

Why Maximo Was Missing.

If you were one of the hardy individuals who braved yesterday's downpour of snowflakes (or was it cornflakes?) to attend the Fox, perhaps you wondered why Maximo, the daring young man who does things on the tight rope, was not among those present, at least not at the first two shows.

It seems that Maximo exceeded even his customary daring Tuesday night, missed his almost always sure footing, crashed to the floor—and there you have it.

Like all good daring young men on tight ropes, Maximo was back on the job as soon as he could hobble about, and those who didn't reach the Fox until the third show saw him cavorting just as though nothing had happened to interfere with his routine. Or is falling off the wire part of the routine?

Ford Also a Casualty.

Maximo was not the only recent casualty at the Fox. Gene Ford, manager of the F street house, escaped the snow yesterday by suddenly deciding to have an attack of appendicitis yesterday morning. He was rushed to Georgetown Hospital, the surgeons got in their licks and Mr. Ford is resting easily, probably congratulating himself on not having had to slush about all day, as do theater managers and dramatic editors—when they are not in the hospital having their appendices extracted.

They Have Artificial Brook.

Barbara Stanwyck, whose latest production, "The Secret Bride," is now showing at the Earle Theater, lives with her husband, Frank Fay, in Brentwood, west of Hollywood, in a large, rambling house which sits in the middle of more than an acre of ground, all surrounded by a high, white stucco wall overgrown with roses. This is one of the largest estates in the movie colony.

Previews of the dramatization of Francis Keats Brown's novel brought "raves" from critics, and tomorrow, when the spectacle of swashbuckling romance and adventure is presented, the public will have an opportunity of seeing what Mr. Cooper and Kathleen Burke, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell and Sir Guy Standing do with roles in a picture which the Coast experts maintained "couldn't miss being a hit."

Rubinoff—ah, there's a name to conjure thoughts of laughter and moments of melody. Master of the violin, conductor of some of the finest stage orchestral units, and a musician to the core, Rubinoff's name has become a household word since his association on radio programs with the man of the dancing eyes, Mr. Eddie Cantor.

So—tomorrow, when Rubinoff comes to the Earle—some may be looking for quizzical quips, but they'll find throbbing melody, and like it!

Let it be known now that "Rubinoff," the comedian of the air, is a double for the real Rubinoff. It's Rubinoff, the magician of music, who is providing the lilting tunes, and the double who's playing the "stooge" for Eddie Cantor. For the week, Rubinoff, in person, will head the stage presentation of the Earle, and on the screen Barbara Stanwyck, who has become one of the mysterious ladies of the films, is starred in "The Secret Bride." Playing opposite her is Warren William, and in the supporting cast is that capable actress, Glenda Farrell.

Ramon Novarro, teamed with piquant Evelyn Laye, stars in a musical comedy "The Night Is Young," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture that Loew's Fox will present for the first time tomorrow.

On the stage the gay theme will be continued with Phil Baker, accordion-playing comedian, heading a revue.

A situation in the story calls for the use of a diving suit when Holt, as a harbor police officer, attempts to apprehend Edmund Lowe trying to recover smuggled gems which had been dropped overboard in an oil drum from an incoming liner. A new undersea device enables Holt to approach his quarry unsuspected. The scene was photographed by means of a diving bell, in which cameras were lowered to the ocean floor, and the action filmed through the plate-glass window.

Will Rogers comes to Loew's Columbia Theater tomorrow in "The County Chairman."

"The County Chairman" was written by a master of humor, George Ade. Will lives the central role of a lovable, fire-eating war horse of a small-town who knows how to capture votes and is hot to handle in a political fight, but who readily gives his all to guide the love of two young romancers whose lives are almost ruined by a political battle.

Featuring Marian Marsh, Ralph Morgan, Louise Morgan and H. B. Walthall, the film is an earthy story of the backwoods.

The direction of Christy Cabanne has captured the mood of the novel, and audiences have given it a response akin to that which greeted "Little Women." There is an elaborate supplementary program at Keith's for the new week's offering.

On the Air Today—Radio News, Programs

By Katherine Smith.

TWO radio stars illumine stage shows this week starting today: Phil Baker, famed for chatter, and Rubinoff, famed for lack of it. Both manage to squeeze a radio appearance into their well filled schedules. Baker will put in his air-time from the Mayflower at 9:30 tonight, WMAL, and Rubinoff will be guest of The Washington Post's "Parade of Youth" broadcast, 5:45 p. m., WJSV.

Baker, arriving with troupe and accordion, is more pepped up about his 10-pound son than anything else. He says he'll pass at least 24 hours campaigning for Stuart Henry Baker's nomination for presidency in 1956. Rubinoff hasn't broken the silence as yet, but under fire of questions from youthful admirers he may have to.

Incidentally WJSV's big studio looks like a toy store—with all the prizes for The Post's contest strewn around. The electric train takes up all the spare time of the engineers, who flop on the floor and fool with switches. Engineers were useful, however, when the train's transformer refused to work.

In addition to Rubinoff, the "Parade of Youth" presents a guitar trio that consists of Warren Tyrrell, 13; Billy Zellers, 14, and Irving Ginsberg, 15—all of Taft Junior High.

Billy Bivens, WJSV's baby announcer, carried a mike into the cold the other day and proceeded to interview the "Man in the Snow." One interviewee, upon answering the question, "Is it could enough for you?" replied, "This a snow? Humph, where I come from we have REAL snow storms." He was from Alaska.

WMAL's Air-O-Nuts Shellie is planning to make drastic changes in his 7:30 a. m. program. He wants to introduce two women characters, one, to do advice to the lovelorn, and what not; the other to reform. One reformation might be suggested—move the program up a few hours. It's too hard to get out of bed that early.

Janie Michaner, G. W. U. student and taxi driver, appears at the mike on Kate Smith's CBS Matinee Hour next Wednesday. Miss Michaner is expected to describe her adventures with the taxi-riding public.

NBC's Announcers' Frolic has been named "Phoney Follies." All suggestions are placed in an old felt hat, jointly worn by Fred Shawn and Carleton Smith. Good ideas will be eliminated. Fred says: "The possibility of any deletion is quite remote." Date will be early in February.

Big names appear on programs today. Fred Astaire and Irene Dunn visit the "Hollywood Hotel" and give excerpts from "Roberta." . . . Isham Jones provides music for the Washington and Lee fancy dress ball, CBS, 12 p. m. . . . "Baby Bea," Lillie presides at a girl campers convention . . . Blanche Yurka will be on Vida Sutton's Magic of Speech program. . . .

March of Time dramatizes the San Quentin prison break, Gen. Johnson's NRA views, developments of the Hauptmann trial and the marriage of Anna Roosevelt Dall.

Buffalo Symphony plays Weber's overture to "Der Frieschutz," Chaikovski's Sixth Symphony (Pathetique) the Scherto from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream," and Debussy's "L'Apres-Midi d'un Faune." Lajos Shuk, conductor-cellist, holds the baton.

Dr. Walter Damrosch is on the NBC Music Appreciation Hour, with illustrations of Sonata form, and a Schumann program.

So far no name has been given to Otto Harbach's new radio show starting Monday. Why not tune in and pick its name yourself? Aside from this interest, the show should be a good one—the first radio performance under the direction of the veteran librettist.

Rubinoff—Minus the Violin

$500,000 Sought To Save Oysters

Money Would Be Spent to Combat Pests.

A bill authorizing the expenditure of a half million dollars for combating starfish, the drill and the leech which are menacing the oyster industry, is before the House Fisheries Committee, according to the Associated Press.

The bill is sponsored by Representative S. O. Bland (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of the committee, and is expected to be reported favorably within a few days.

Of the $500,000 proposed for fighting the pests which are said to be threatening the destruction of the industry, $126,000 would be spent in northern waters along the Atlantic Coast infested by the starfish, $250,000 in the southern waters where the leech is playing havoc with the industry, and $100,000 in the Midatlantic Coast area where the drill is killing the oyster.

The rest of the appropriation would be used for special investigations of the creatures to aid in future eradication.

Mais, Legenza Will Die First

Execution Put Ahead of Other 3 Inmates of Virginia Death House.

Richmond, Jan. 24 (AP).—Of five men now sentenced to die in the Virginia electric chair, Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, the last to arrive, will be the first to walk their last 13 steps.

Gov. Peery today granted a reprieve to Haywood Johnson, Princess Anne County colored man who was to have died January 31.

Another reprieve has been granted Noah Newton, of Fredericksburg, under sentence of death, and the electrocution date for Philip Jones, Clifton Forge colored man, is not until March.

Upon their return to Richmond Tuesday after their escape from the Richmond Jail last September, Mais and Legenza were ordered to die February 2.

The reprieve until March 8 was granted Johnson, and counsel immediately filed with the Supreme Court a petition for a writ of error. The reprieve was authorized by Gov. Peery when he was convinced the delay in filing the petition was unavoidable because of illness of the lawyer.

Mrs. Anna L. Major Is Buried in Virginia

Culpeper, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Mrs. Anna Lee Hill Major, 88, member of a prominent Virginia family, and wife of Philip Major, died early Tuesday morning after a brief illness of pneumonia, at Glendalough, her home in Madison County.

She is survived by her husband and two brothers, Irving Hill and Dr. Hugh Hill, of Locust Dale, Madison County. She was related to the late Gen. A. P. Hill of the Confederacy, and widely connected in Culpeper. Funeral services were held at the residence yesterday, with burial at Glendalough.

Hollandsworth's Plea To Be Heard Tomorrow

Princeton, W. Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.). Having been convicted by a jury of first degree murder, with a recommendation for mercy, which means life imprisonment instead of hanging, Henry Hollandsworth, 58, of Gardner, today awaited a court ruling on a motion for a new trial. Arguments on the motion have been set for tomorrow.

Hollandsworth was convicted of killing Constable Joe Davidson last October 9. He contended, however, that Isaac Taylor Robinett, a fugitive, slew the officer.

Show Is Planned To Cut Fire Debt

Greencastle, Pa., Jan. 24 (Spl.). The Rescue Hose Company will present its seventh annual minstrel show in the public school auditorium on February 21, 22 and 23, with 25 local persons in the cast. The proceeds will be used to reduce the indebtedness on the community pumper.

The company responded to 28 alarms during the past year, 14 in the town and 14 in the country, and drove the pumper approximately 150 miles.

$764,000 in Pest Program.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 24 (AP).—Fifty-three malaria control and mosquito drainage projects costing approximately $764,000 were proposed today by Richard Messer, chief sanitary officer for the State health department for the new work relief program in Virginia. Most of them would be located in the Tidewater area.

$4,000 More Is Asked For Boundary Board

An additional $4,000 for the District-Virginia Boundary Commission, which is still engaged in trying to fix the southern boundary of Washington, is provided in an amendment to the deficiency bill approved yesterday by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Bills asking for this addition have been introduced in the Senate and the House. The commission was given an appropriation of $10,000 last year upon its creation. A request had been made for $15,000.

Gas Heating plants have no complicated machinery, nothing but a quiet flame fed by a pipe and controlled by a silent thermostat. Gas heating is so quiet and so completely automatic that only the constant warmth of your home reminds you that a heating plant is in operation. No fuel to order, no fuel to store. Nothing to do but enjoy the solid comfort of perfect heating at a cost that is far less than you would probably suspect. Won't you let us tell you more?

EVERY highball-fancier has his favorite mixing ingredient. But the big question is: What are you mixing it with?

Use Four Roses—and you'll have the best answer to that!

For here's a whiskey mellow as moonlight, rich and fragrant as its famous name. Because Four Roses is not only American—every drop of it—but it's American whiskey made in the costly old-fashioned way. It has the richness that comes only from Kentucky and Maryland limestone water. And it's made by men who have grown up in the business, men whose daddies and grand-daddies were whiskey-makers before them.

Just try a Four Roses highball at your favorite hotel or restaurant. Or take a bottle home and compare it with the whiskey you've been using. We'll wager Four Roses will be your choice from then on!

Diplomats Are Honored At White House Dinner

New 1,500-Piece China Service Used for First Time; Additional Guests Invited for Program of Music and Dancing.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The dinner given at the White House by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt last night in honor of the representatives of foreign countries and their wives was a brilliant affair.

The table in the state dining room was the cynosure of all eyes, for the much discussed new White House china, a 1,500-piece service, arrived just in time to be used. Banded with deep blue, the new china bears the President's seal on each plate, and inside the blue border is another narrow border, into which the three roses of the Roosevelt coat of arms have been worked in a conventionalized design, "dating" the service, pieces of which will go into the famous and historically valuable collection of White House china. This service, differing from many other services which have been used in the Executive Mansion, was made in this country.

Monroe Centerpiece Used.

The Monroe centerpiece was used. It was filled with light pink carnations, flesh pink roses, baby primula and adriantum baldii fern. Gold baskets along the length of the table were filled with the same flowers.

Every country which has diplomatic representation in Washington was represented with the exception of Chile and Yugoslavia. The Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, is ill and so was not able to attend, and the Minister of Yugoslavia, Dr. Leonide Pitamic, is in Europe, but was not represented by his Charge d'Affaires because the country is observing official mourning for the late King Alexander.

Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, the dean of the corps, was absent from town, and next in order of precedence is the Ambassador of Peru. Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, who is a widower, so Senora de Espil, charming American wife of the Ambassador of Argentine, sat in the place of honor at the President's right.

The only guests who were not members of the diplomatic corps were the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull; Senator Key Pittman, chairman of the Foreign Relaitons Committee, and Mrs. Pittman; Representative Sam D. McReynolds, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, and Mrs. McReynolds; Col. Louis McH. Howe, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, and Miss Marguerite LeHand.

Musical Program Given.

Following the dinner, there was a program of music and dancing, to which additional guests were invited. La Argentina, Spanish dancer, gave a number of her well known interpretations, which included "Cordoba," Andalusian tango, fire dance from the ballet "El Amor Brujo," a ritual dance of the Andalusian gypsies for driving away evil spirits, and "La Corrida," impressions of a bull fight.

The Vienna Choir Boys, with Rector Josef Schnitt, dean, and Dr. Georg Gruber, director of music, also gave a program of delightful numbers, which included "Silent Night, Holy Night," "Maria ging aus Wandern," "Schlafe Mein Prinzehen," "Sizilianisches Jagdlied," "Tales of the Vienna Woods," "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," "Dixie" and "Beautiful Blue Danube."

Who's Where—and Why, Around the Capital.

Perhaps it is not generally known that the late Judge John Barton Payne as a young boy worked in Ullman's Department Store in Warrenton. As a consequence, on his trips to his Saint Leonard's Farm outside of that town, he seldom failed to pay his respects to Mrs. Ullman, the widow of the man who had befriended him in his youth.

As though foreign names were not sufficiently difficult to cope with, some diplomats have wives from other countries. You might innocently say to the wife of the Belgian Ambassador that you thought the Argentines played poor polo, only to find that the Countess comes from the Argentine; or to Mrs. Arthur Wiggin, of the British Embassy, that the beauty of Spanish architecture is dubious, and afterward learn that she is from Spain.

* * * *

There is no limit to the faux pas one can make, for here are some of the international marriages: the wife of the Danish Minister is Uruguayan; Mrs. Harold Sims is Danish; Mme. Saint, of the French Embassy, and Mme. Walravens, of the Belgian, are both Chilean; the wife of the Portuguese Minister, Senora de Bianchi, is Russian, as is Senora de Echegaray, of the Spanish Embassy; Mme. Djalal, wife of the Persian Minister, and Mrs. Petrova, wife of the Bulgarian Charge d'Affaires, are English; Senora de Yrujo, of the Spanish Embassy, is Mexican; Baroness van Breugel Douglas, of the Dutch Legation, is Rumanian, and Mme. Ratib Bey, wife of the Egyptian Minister, is Turkish.

There are many American wives in the Diplomatic Corps, but they do not constitute such conversational pitfalls.

* * * *

So Gen. and Mrs. A. T. Smith are deserting us. What will "G2" be without "A. T.?" And who will inherit the general's license plate number, "G2," which he so cherished?

Really, Mr. Waggaman, as marshal of the Supreme Court you should know better than to intone: "The court is sitting," when, in fact, the justices are all standing.

New Tint Gives Luster to Hair Dulled by Gray

By Ruth Anne Davis.

NOT AS STRONG as a dye and yet equally as effective is the hair tint a certain young hairdresser uses in his downtown shop.

He has been literally brought up in the hairdressing field and has studied intensely here and in Europe. He is always on his toes to find the newest and most recently perfected means for turning one's hair into the crowning glory it should be. One of his latest steps was the acquisition of this tint which rescues the hair from splotchy grayness and lack of color.

Discussing this preparation yesterday he said it was fast supplanting ordinary dyes because after it is applied and the hair grows out a bit there is no telltale dye line. Because of this a woman may go for a long period before finding it necessary to have her hair "redone."

It is a delicate shading that may be applied as lightly as the customer likes. If she wants a few gray hairs left over the temples in order to make her tinting appear absolutely natural, this is easily done.

It would pay all women who fear their age is being broadcast by their hair to drop by this conveniently located shop and have a talk with the proprietor. A large part of his success is due to the fact that he considers his clients as individuals and advises them for their own particular needs, not following the easy course of generalities which so often makes Mrs. Smith a duplicate of Mrs. Jones.

Superior Slips Offered.

There's much ado about something in the "undie world" today. A local store is tempting us far from the straight and narrow budget path with a sensational sale on slips. Not just ordinary slips, mind you, but silk crepe slips with bonded seams which ordinarily sell for much more than their present price of $1.69 or two for $3.15.

These slips come in 12 attractive styles, some with lace, some without, V-necks, straight necks, high or low backs, in white or tea rose.

The manufacturer has listed their 12 points of superiority. These, he says, are:

1. Made of an extra special fine quality of silk crepe.
2. Narrow adjustable straps—won't slide, slip, or twist.
3. Made with darts at underarm bustline for smooth sleek fit.
4. Trimmed with exquisite imported nonshiftable laces.
5. Fine details of workmanship found only in expensive slips.
6. Proportioned to human figure by being 2 inches wider over the hips than around bust.
7. Biased cut front and back assures perfect fit.
8. Bonded seams are guaranteed pull-proof.
9. Absolutely guarantee to replace any slip that's unsatisfactory.
10. Will not shrink.
11. Will not shift.
12. All 12 models are full cut throughout.

Friction Mit Warms Body.

Strange as it seems—a friction mit is better than a portable radiator for keeping you warm from morn 'till night. After the alarm clock has sounded its dread tidings, hop out of bed and into the shower. Reach for the porcupinish little mit and give yourself as brisk a rubdown as you dare. Your circulation starts on the increase. That weary, weighty feeling falls from your eyelids, and pretty soon you've got that world-is-mine feeling that should net you a raise in two weeks.

You'll find that while those about you are shivering and shaking with the cold you'll be feeling perfectly swell, and all because of a friction mit.

They are made of coarse, corded hemp that feels a little, ahem—rough—at first. But when you see how good you feel, you'll prefer them to the soft and satiny washclothes that lull you into laziness.

Snow Capes on Display.

Those who must venture forth from home even in the face of a Washington blizzard will appreciate the snow capes on display in an F street store.

These are light little soft rubber capes that cover you like a Roman toga from the end of your chin to the top of your boots. When you wear them for protection from a light drizzle they revert to rain capes, but this time of year when there's likely to be a snow flurry in every gray cloud, just ask for snow capes. They come in white, green, blue, brown and gray, and cost anything from $1, to $1.50.

A Simple Marcel Iron.

A local shop is featuring a marcel iron which is simple for home use. The young lady who has been demonstrating it takes braids of hair, clips on the iron, touches a gadget, moves the iron an inch or two, presses a spring again, and so on until she has marceled the whole braid. The waves are smooth and as evenly undulating as though they had been done by a professional.

The iron is arranged so that you also can make these loose graceful waves. In order to insure you against burnt hair there is a heat control which prevents the iron from becoming too hot.

Culbertson on Bridge

The Rule Player.

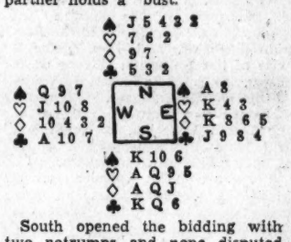
Any bidding system must be built upon certain fundamental rules which form the basic premises. Certain bids convey specific information while others may be only inferential. As the variety of card patterns reach into the millions, no rule can be unquestionably applicable, in each and every instance. The ability to deduce is as important in bridge as in business.

Knowing the system thoroughly, the Rule Player pairs with an imaginative partner. He bids strictly to the book while partner calls according to his knowledge of bridge fundamentals. After a few hands the misunderstanding is complete. Faith has fled. Sometimes, the Rule Player gets angry and begins quoting authorities, holding the partner up to ridicule before the victorious enemy. The latter may suffer in silence or retaliate. In any case, their hopes are wrecked, dispositions ruined and in bickering they become more obnoxious than a phantom pair in a duplicate game.

The remedy. Remember, there are 600,000,000 varieties of card formations. No rule can fit all of them.

Forcing an Entry to Dummy.

There is an art in playing a hand full of tenaces; especially when your partner holds a "bust."



South opened the bidding with two notrumps and none disputed him. He was horrified at North's pass—until the dummy went down.

The Play.

West, anticipating a trickless dummy, chose a heart rather than a diamond lead as less likely to help Declarer. The Jack of hearts rode to the Queen.

To establish declarer's minor suit tricks by force would result in his losing a trick to every outstanding high card. He was forced to throw the lead as often as possible and let the opponents play the hand for him.

The first suit to be utilized for throw-in must be the spade. South led the King, for two reasons: He might drop a blank Queen and so win two tricks, whereas to lead small and drop a blank Ace would gain nothing, and the lead of the King might hold through a first-round hold-up. This would operate to bail out adverse small spades and so deprive the opponents of spade exit from the throw-in.

East topped the spade King with the Ace and returned the King of hearts. South won, and when West dropped the eight, South continued with the five of hearts to establish his nine.

West was on the spot. He advisedly shunned a diamond lead and selected the seven of clubs as against the spade nine. The club lead brought out the Jack and King. Again it was up to South to decide what to do. Should he stake all on dropping the spade Queen doubleton by a lead of the spade ten? Or should he simply force entry to dummy through the Jack, placing the Queen with West? His lead was the spade six. West had to duck the spade to kill the suit, and the Jack held.

Dummy utilized the entry for a diamond lead, and the finesse won. South cashed his long heart. A club lead put West in to cash two club tricks, and West had to pitch up to the major diamond tenace.

Declarer thus made contract, winning one spade, three hearts, three diamonds and a club.

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

IF JANUARY 25 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m.

On this January 25 the person who indulges in any form of arrogance may have a lesson taught him in civility which will be long remembered. It might be well to remember there is never any justification for anyone, claiming to be a lady or gentleman, to resort to deliberate rudeness.

If invited to a social gathering it might save embarrassment if you ascertain if the affair will be formal or informal, so you will be properly appareled. Married and engaged couples, as well as those seeking to gain someone's favor, will display good judgment if they control their tempers, regardless of how trying the situation may be.

If a woman, and January 25 is your birthday, you are probably a so-called born diplomat. Your good sense, combined with tact, will always enable you to extricate yourself from trying situations. You should, regardless of how complicated conditions might seem, always be successful in the solving of financial problems. Courage is all you need to see you through anything, no matter how discouraging it might appear at the time. In affairs where great affection or love is involved, no matter how many rifts may ruffle the peace of your mind, contentment and happiness should eventually more than compensate for any temporary anxiety.

Stenography, teaching, demonstrating and selling might possibly be the best lines from which to select a means of earning a livelihood.

If a man, and January 25 is your natal day, your gift of ready speech should prove your greatest asset. Military life, the stage, legal or medical profession, as well as a musical career, may provide the best means to gain renown.

A round and shapely contour is one requisite of a perfect apple dumpling. The proof of its flavor is still in the eating, however, so the cook must strive to please the eye as well as the palate.

Rome Beauties Proposed as Best Types for Home Baking.

By Dorothea Duncan.

NO DINNER bell was ever as enticing as the warm air from the kitchen that carries in its wake the aroma of cooked apples, sugar blending with cinnamon and a suspicion of nutmeg, and freshly baked pastry. The secret is out. There will be apple dumplings for dinner. What a wise choice for a day of wintry blasts and falling snow!

Deep dishes for serving the dumplings, those that will allow plenty of room for cream, milk or sauce, are an essential part of the picture. Warm cream and milk, half and half, slightly sweetened and flavored with vanilla is one of the most appropriate sauces for the hot apple dumpling.

Greased Pan Necessary.

If you have been unsuccessful in turning out an apple dumpling of perfect contour, try making your next ones like this. Take Rome beauties, medium-sized ones, core and peel them. Rome beauties are suggested because they are considered superior to all other apples for baking. They bake rapidly and the fruit needs no precooking and can be used whole rather than quartered. The whole apple has a lot to do with a perfectly round dumpling.

Make a pastry, the same as you would for pie, and roll it about one-quarter of an inch thick. Then cut it in pieces about 4 inches square. Place an apple on each square, filling the center of the fruit with a little sugar, cinnamon, and nutmeg, and a tiny piece of butter. Moisten the edges of the dough with cold water and fold together at the top. Leave a little hole at the top so that the steam formed in cooking will have a way of escape.

Place the dumplings in a greased pan and set them in a very hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) for 15 to 20 minutes or until the crust has had a chance to set. Reduce the heat to about 400 degrees Fahrenheit and continue baking for 20 to 30 minutes longer. Serve warm with the above-mentioned sauce of milk and cream.

Apple dumplings, especially when served with milk, provide a nourishing and extremely filling dessert, so plan the rest of your meal accordingly. Saturday, when dinner is not so pretentious a meal, is the ideal time for the dumplings. A plate of hot vegetables will be a good runner-up.

Vegetables Suggested.

Root vegetables and some green ones are particularly good and not out of bounds for the average income this week. Try a combination of broccoli with hollandaise sauce, hot pickled beets, and a baked stuffed potato with cheese. Whole wheat bread and butter, coffee and milk for the children will complete the meal.

Beets cooked in the skin and then placed in the juice from a bottle of sweet pickles which has been heated, have a light, sweet, spicy flavor.

Tasty Green Vegetables Within Range of the Average Purse.

Pattern No. 854.

EVERY ONE should, but every one doesn't know what raglan sleeves really do. In the first place, they are very flattering and make a too-plump arm look just pleasingly round. They soften the lines of too-thin arm and are very smart into the bargain.

This frock, it's a "Sew-Simple" design, has those much-to-be-desired raglan sleeves and is surely the perfect afternoon choice for the woman with a mature figure. The neckline is graciously becoming. Shaped panels in the skirt have a low, circular fullness. The dress would be grand in a printed semisheer. Sizes are 34 to 46. Size 40 requires 4⅝ yards of 39-inch material for the entire frock.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Treatment of Bright's Disease.

WE may be interested in the what and how of a disease, but after all our chief concern is "What can I do?" If Bright's disease is present in any form treatment is uppermost in our minds.

There are a few general measures that must be followed in order that the patient may be protected against an increase in the severity of the disease. Chilling the skin must be avoided. This includes exposure to cold, cold bathing, cold rooms, and even very cold drinks. Moderate exercise should be the rule. The patient must attempt to live as normal a life as possible, attending to his regular work—all with the understanding that he will keep from becoming unduly fatigued.

The diet on the whole must be that of the average person of a given age. At one time it was thought that meat should not be eaten, as it was believed that the necessary excretion of nitrogen (found in meat) would throw too heavy a load upon already damaged kidneys. This theory has been shown to be erroneous and many patients with Bright's disease do much better on a diet that contains more protein (meat) than normal. Furthermore there is a considerable loss of protein in the albumin thrown off and this deficit must be made up in the diet.

Spectacular results often follow the generous feeding of meat when the patient has been deprived or has deprived himself of this type of ration. With practice patients can generally determine the approximate quantity of meat required. If there is no swelling of the extremities and if there is no tissue wasting an average amount of protein only may be needed. Should the appetite flag, some bitter tonic (without strychnine) may be of help and alcohol in the form of port wine in moderate amounts has been used.

Care must be taken to avoid undernourishment, as the Bright's disease patient too frequently attempts to starve himself. A regular or even generous diet will make for comfort, maintain nutrition, and prolong life. This, however, does not mean excess food beyond the utilizing ability of the body.

Inasmuch as anemia is nearly always present in Bright's disease, liver feeding may be of value at times, as iron taken in the usual form appears to affect the anemia of kidney disease but slightly.

AIR STEWARDESS

By VIDA HURST

Irene Gardner is heartsick when Bartlett Ralston, brilliant young interne, reluctantly tells her that they can't be married. He is ambitious to work in the office of Dr. Stephen Reagan, prominent surgeon, and mentions that he might enhance his future opportunities by marrying Reagan's daughter, Peggy.

Lacking the courage to continue nursing in the same hospital with Bart, Irene gets a position as air stewardess on a San Francisco air line. She later takes an apartment with another air stewardess, Virginia Cathcart, and pretty Eve Meadows, whose gay fluttering from one love to another is her chief worry.

Irene strikes up an acquaintance with a charming passenger, Clarence Turner, who calls her up when she is off duty and takes her to lunch. After leaving him, Irene stops at the hospital for the first time since she left. She feels able to meet Bart wearing gardenias from another admirer.

IRENE told herself it was Pete Evans she wanted to see. Pete had telephoned that she had a case at the hospital. If Irene hurried she could catch her there before Pete went off duty. The fact that she hoped also to run into Bartlett Ralston was not admitted to her conscious mind.

She told herself she couldn't remain away from the hospital too long or the girls would think it queer. Besides, wouldn't Bart himself think she was hurt worse if she never appeared than if she did?

The sight of her looking remarkably well in the black suit, wearing gardenias which obviously had not been bought on the street, should convince him that she was not exactly having a nervous breakdown over him, she argued, walking up the hospital steps.

Visited the Wards.

She stopped in the children's ward and came away without the gardenias, which she had placed in the apathetic hand of the youngster suffering from anemia. And then she must run into 210 to see if the carcinoma case had died yet. The poor soul had been there almost a year.

The floor nurse spoke to her eagerly.

"Hello, Irene! How does it feel to be a lady of leisure?"

"Leisure nothing!" Irene smiled. "You'd be surprised how I have to work."

"You look like Mrs. Astorbilt," the other retorted.

"Where's Pete?" she demanded.

"Women's surgical—418."

Riding up in the elevator, Irene expected to see Bart at any moment. An interne did get on at the third floor, but it was only Charlie Robinson. Pasty-faced, lazy Charlie!

"Hello, Irene," he said. "How does it feel to sail around in the clouds?"

"Four, please!"

There he was at the far end of the corridor disappearing into the chartroom. If he had turned his head, he would have seen her. But he hadn't. A surge of longing like a physical spasm swept her whole body leaving her weak.

Nurse Was Curious.

White-faced and shaking, she knocked at 418 to tell Pete where she would be; then, afraid to wait for the elevator, she hurried down the stairs, out the door, and to Pete's apartment a block away.

When Pete arrived, Irene was sitting in a chair staring out the window.

"What's the trouble with you and Bartlett?" questioned the nurse, flinging herself upon the day-bed.

"No trouble," Irene denied. "You said yourself it would be a mistake for us to marry."

"So what? You aren't trying to imply that you are following my advice?"

"Not exactly, but I decided that, everything considered, it would be better for me to go to work. I've always had a secret yen to fly."

"Have you indeed?" Pete inquired dryly. "I suppose you haven't heard that Bart is going into Dr. Reagan's office?"

Irene flipped the ashes from a cigarette.

"Is he really?"

"Nor that he's being seen every place with Dr. Reagan's daughter, Peggy?"

Irene attempted a nonchalant response, choked on it, and said nothing.

"You poor kid!" comforted the nurse. "You should have known Bartlett Ralston hasn't a thought in his head but surgery. He would sell himself body and soul to get ahead."

It was a relief an hour and a half later to be crossing the bay. Leaving the hospital and its memories behind her.

"Thank goodness I've a place of my own to go to," Irene thought. "Not just a room in a hotel."

The vision of the apartment, clean and tidy as she had left it, cheered her. She would cook her own dinner and have a quiet evening with a book before the fire. Virginia was working and Eve had said she was having a date with the lumberman from Seattle, but when Irene put her key in the lock she opened the door to the sight of Eve closely held in a strange man's arms.

"I'm sorry," faltered Irene.

Eve said, unabashed, "This is Mr. Carney. He's just returned from Los Angeles."

So it wasn't the lumberman after all, but the vacuum cleaner man—but what did it matter? In either case they had wrecked the living room. Stubs from several dozen cigarettes, two sticky, empty glasses, the scattered pages of a newspaper and Eve's discarded coat, hat, gloves and pocketbook littered the place. Irene went into her own room and shut the door and after awhile Eve came in.

"We're leaving now. If anyone telephones say I've been called out of town."

"Do you mean you're going away for the week-end?"

"Certainly not! That's merely my story for the big lumberman. You see, I didn't expect Dick back until next week."

Flirting was a game it seemed either sex could play. But what was the use? Where did it get you?

Half an hour later the telephone rang again and this time it was Clarence Turner.

"It so happens," he said in his usual pleasant voice, "that I've been released from an engagement I made several weeks ago. Would it be asking too much of you to come back to the city again tonight? I'll be glad to drive over for you."

Irene gazed about the disordered living room.

"Meet me at the ferry instead" she suggested.

"Right," he agreed briefly, but this time the eagerness in his voice was unmistakable.

"All of which helps," Irene admitted as, refreshed by a bath and a cup of hot tea, she dressed in her best dinner dress. She had bought it at an after-Christmas sale, but it had been expensive and it was jade green, to match her eyes.

"If I'm going out with him often, I'll need more clothes," she was thinking en route to the boat.

Mr. Turner was waiting for her. Since their parting earlier in the day his manner seemed to have become more intimate.

"I'm so glad to see you," he said. "I was afraid you might have another engagement."

She said then, curiously, "You look different. As if you were a little boy who had just been let out of school."

"That's the way I feel. It's Saturday night and I've a date with the prettiest girl in San Francisco. Who wouldn't feel gay?"

"Have you ever been to Molinari's?" he asked.

"No, but I've heard about it. I'd love to go there."

"You shall," he promised. "Later. But first we're going for a ride."

Mrs. Ellis A. Yost May Be Drafted For Congress Race in West Virginia

Has No Definite Plans for the Future Except a Vacation.

ACTIVE politics in West Virginia, perhaps a seat in Congress, and a host of other possibilities are open to Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, whose resignation as director of women's work for the Republican national committee becomes effective February 1. As yet the blonde and vivacious Republican executive has made no definite plans for the future. Politics, she admitted, and in particular, progressive politics, is her first love.

Mrs. Yost smiled enigmatically down at a stack of communications from women of her home State, urging her to consider this possibility.

"I have nothing to say," she insisted. Then she added, "I know one thing, I'm going to take a perfectly grand vacation first of all. Where? Oh, perhaps right here in Washington. There are so many things I've always wanted to do—spending long hours listening in on Congress—attending Senate hearings from beginning to end, and oh, lots of things. Then there are so many friends I've wanted to see more of. It will give me my first opportunity in years to visit again."

A Pioneer Suffragist.

A pioneer in the sufferage cause, Mrs. Yost, who led the fight for ratification in West Virginia, has frequently been named as the most outstanding woman of her State. Once she was referred to, editorially, as one of the "ten most prominent West Virginians." She was the only woman on the list which included such names as John W. Davis.

This is not the first time Mrs. Yost has been urged as a candidate for Congress. Both Senate and House seats have been dangled before her by enthusiastic West Virginia admirers. She declined all such invitations up until 1930, when she suddenly announced her candidacy for the Lower House. Later, however, she withdrew from the race to accept her present position as head of the women's division for the Republican National Committee.

A Cabinet Possibility.

With the election of President Hoover in 1928, writers began mentioning her as potential Cabinet material. Her name was suggested along with those of Ruth Hanna McCormick, Alice Roosevelt Longworth and Nellie Tayloe Ross.

What trend would the Republican Party follow in the future? Mrs. Yost would not volunteer a prediction. Nor would she admit whether her own inclinations would veer to right or left, once she severed her connections with the national committee.

Her past record and her latest legislative hobbies, however, place her definitely in the progressive ranks. Her hardest-fought battles have always been in nonpartisan causes. As a member of the West Virginia State Board of Education for 12 years, Mrs. Yost has built up friendly contacts among members of both parties, which she holds to this day.

Suffrage, social welfare and educational legislation have found her an effective lobbyist and speaker. As former chairman of legislation for the State Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Yost even tried her hand at writing and drafting bills when proposed legislative enactments did not measure up to her ideals.

As member of the State Board of Education Mrs. Yost promoted and was able to see completed a woman's building at the University of West Virginia.

Underwood & Underwood.

The fields of active politics and public welfare are expected to claim the interest of Mrs. Ellis A. Yost upon her resignation February 1 as director of woman's work for the National Republican Committee.

Soviet Child Likes to Be Up During Party

SOVIET CHILDREN, usually serious minded beyond their years, have revealed a normally adolescent attitude on at least one count. They don't like being marched off to bed when there's company. This fact was brought to light recently when questionnaires were sent to a dozen Soviet children and a similar number of French youngsters to learn differences in their mental outlook.

It was the question as to what they most disliked that brought from the Soviet children "going to bed early when there's company," reports the San Francisco Chronicle. Other answers to the same question ran in typical Soviet vein such as: "Bourgeoisie," "the German language," "speculators," "drunkards," and "scolding fathers."

The French children said things they dislike most are: "Latin teachers," "drunkards," "cold," and "those who want war."

When asked what was their ideal in life the Soviet youngsters responded: "To overthrow capitalism and build socialism," "to be like Voroshiloff (defense minister)," and "to be outstanding in sport."

The French children's aims in life included "to be rich," "to have a bicycle," "to read books with happy endings," "to travel" and "to be an admiral."

When asked about God all the Soviet children declared He was an invention of priests. The French boys and girls gave answers that ranged from pantheism to the belief that God was a bearded old man who probably had died.

Girl Making Only $20 a Week Can Dress Smartly, Actress Says

Bette Davis Bases Opinion on Her Own Experience, Explaining Details of Budget Method of Allotting Expenses.

AN INTELLIGENT girl can dress smartly on an income of $20 a week, Bette Davis, screen star, thinks. She bases her opinion on her own experience and brings it up to date with the assistance of a friend "who earns exactly $20 a week, a chic young woman who receives countless compliments on her appearance."

It's all done by the budget method. First, there's a monthly budget that runs as follows: Rent, $15; food, $23; savings, $5; insurance, $3,50; carfare, $3 miscellaneous, $10, and clothes, $25. The total is $85 a month. The additional $5 over the four-week total comes for the extra days in the month.

"Fifteen dollars for rent is the amount needed for a good room in a private home in many cities," Miss Davis said. "Where rents are higher, the solution is for two or three girls to room together. Food should not cost more than $23 unless the girl is afflicted with an enormous appetite. The allowance for miscellaneous items covers such necessities as cosmetics, beauty treatments, cleaning bills, cigarettes and an occasional concert or movie. This allotment, of course, can be used for other things if the girl does her own manicuring, shampooing and cleaning."

Wardrobe Suggested.

The monthly allotment for clothes, Miss Davis pointed out, brings the total to $306 a year. A wardrobe that can be purchased for this amount includes a dress suit, a swagger suit, black crepe dress, coat, wool dress, two summer dresses, a summer suit, two evening ensembles, four hats, five pairs of shoes, $20 worth of hosiery, gloves, two blouses and two sweaters, lingerie (amounting to $25), and miscellaneous accessories to the amount of $20.

A good suit, Miss Davis believes, is the most essential requirement of the wardrobe. It should cost about $39.50.

"This may appear to be an extravagance," she says, "but its durability and adaptablity make it a real economy.

"A black crepe dress of silk or wool is another indispensable item. It should be simple in line, so that by changing the collars and cuffs, or adding a jewelled ornament, it may be worn either in the daytime or to informal parties.

"Formal evening clothes should always be black or white, or in a solid color. Gowns with matching wraps are attractive, but it is more practicable to purchase a bright-colored wrap equally flattering to both gowns."

Compiles List of "Do's."

1. Have a tailored coat of neutral color to wear the year round.
2. For summer, wear only wash dresses either of silk or cotton.
3. Always buy two or three pairs of stockings at one time, and of the same color.
4. Buy lingerie of rayon or jersey, so laundering will be of the minimum.
5. Freshen up your own clothes with cleansing solvent.

Among the "dont's" she lists these suggestions:

1. Avoid freak hats, bags and all superfluous accessories.
2. Resist the temptation to buy clothes "gold bricks" no matter how enticing they seem.

"Remember," she warns, "the girl who never substitutes flash for quality usually merits the admiration accorded to her appearance."

A simple black dress should be an essential part of every girl's wardrobe, says Bette Davis, screen star. Miss Davis illustrates her theory in the above costume.

Any Home-Building Program Must Educate Individuals To Live Together in Harmony

By Malvina Lindsay
(Woman's Page Editor).

VERY FITTINGLY the club women of the Nation are undertaking to make homes out of the houses the Government hopes to provide its citizens. For club women, once ridiculed by the ignorant as busy-bodies who neglected their families, have now come to be recognized as those who bring the most vitality and beauty to the hearthside.

• • • •

To supply such intangibles to the housing program is of course a large order. Yet it is not such an up-in-the-clouds project as it might seem. For the art of living is surprisingly akin to the science of living.

• • • •

The housing program in its fundamental conception—a separate abode for every family—reaches toward the basis of happy home life. To expect harmonious living in a house occupied by two or three families is as far-fetched as to demand that the poor be clean when soap money must go for bread. Giving each family its own shelter will be a big step toward better home life. Another practical measure would be to see that each family had a home adequate as to space, that no pill boxes were erected to cramp the bodies and spirits of their occupants.

A GREAT DEAL of sentimental blather has been spilled about family life in the old days. It was too often narrow, tyrannical and dull. But it had one asset—it was physically roomy. Houses may have been drafty and inconvenient, but they were usually large enough to permit individuals some measure of personal privacy. And if the house was small, there was the yard, pasture or woods in which one could possess one's soul.

• • • •

Katherine Fullerton Gerould has said aptly "the most aristocratic element in life physically speaking is spaciousness." Certainly it is an element that contributes to expansion of mind and spirit. In a land so spacious as this, any new program of home life should provide not only a "castle" for every family, but for each individual a room of one's own both physically and spiritually.

• • • •

The club women's program for better home life includes such concrete measures as the abolition of child labor and child marriage, the stamping out of narcotics, the promotion of home gardens, and education in home economics and manual training. All of these measures constitute fertile physical soil for the flowering of family life. And to them might well be added more widespread education in the art of group living.

THE OLD-TIME patriarchal family has passed and a new family life, combining, paradoxically, more individual self-expression and more group cooperation, is being developed. The changing of the old order for the new still creates much tension in many households, leaves one generation dismayed, the other rebellious.

• • • •

Consequently, any modern program of home-dwelling must include education in human relationships just as truly as it includes education in home economics and backyard gardening. No house will ever be a home no matter how many electrical gadgets it possesses, no matter how effectively its bathroom is decorated, no matter how high a moral atmosphere pervade its hearthside, unless its occupants have some psychological understanding of each other, unless they have learned to practice a live-and-let-live philosophy.

• • • •

The housing program should provide individuals physical room in which to breathe. Clubs, schools and churches should take over the task of helping them stretch the wings of their spirits.

Paris Concern Runs a Beauty Shop for Dogs

Paris, long famous for well-dressed women, is on its way to new glory because of well-groomed dogs. The Towsers and Fidos of the French capital now have a beauty parlor of their own, the United Press reports.

The "Institute de Beaute pour Chiens" is on the first floor of a large establishment. The second floor is devoted to the beauty needs of the dogs' owners. While Mademoiselle or Madame is having a henna rinse or a facial, her pet can get anything from a manicure to curled forelocks.

Man Acquaintance Asks How He May Help Girl Mend Broken Heart.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: A young lady, an acquaintance of mine, is deeply troubled and grief stricken at having committed her heart to a man of great charm and tremendous good looks, but who seems sadly lacking in honor and fidelity to her. I stand hopelessly barred outside her circle of friends, watching with aching heart the cruel tide of circumstance which is destroying her hope of happiness.

• • • •

Miss Haworth, can a mere acquaintance tear down the wall of social impediment which stands between a girl and a man whom she knows only slightly and offer his sincere friendship, counsel and understanding?

• • • •

I am a constant reader of your column, and deeply admire the deep insight into human nature and the wisdom which you show in handling every problem placed before you. I trust you may give me the help I need in dealing with this situation. FAITHFUL.

A Delicate Matter.

DEAR FAITHFUL: I can think of no way whereby you might summarily waive the conventional barrier existing between you and this girl who knows you only slightly, and offer her the spiritual protection of your friendship, counsel and understanding, without incurring a risk of bitterly wounding her pride and doing more harm than good. To do so might be to act the role of fool blundering in where angels hesitate to tread.

• • • •

Proven friendship of long standing, built on a foundation of mutual respect and confidence, would seem the only justification for daring to penetrate the reticence of a broken heart. And even such friendship has often found the door slammed in its face when it ventured to pick up and put out of sight the fragments of another's shattered ideal.

• • • •

Your interest seems hopeless of expression; just now, at any rate. However, if it goes beyond compassionate sympathy; if you are in love with the girl, you may be willing to exert yourself in the direction of compelling her interest, gaining her confidence and healing her sorrow by creating a new emotional interest with yourself as the object. But there is no royal road for overriding conventions nor for breaking down the reserves of the human heart. M. H.

Persia Copies English Educational System

Boys and girls in Persia are being educated in schools patterned as closely after the English as the Persian government can make them. Since the time of Cyrus the three R's of Persian education have consisted of learn-to ride, to shoot and to tell the truth. But now typical public school courses are being added to this curriculum. The government is also sending men and women students abroad so they can study schools in other lands at first hand.

Mrs. O'Day's Objective Is Security Legislation

(Associated Press.)

THE curious who come to the House galleries these days ask first to see Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York, "the woman for whom Mrs. Roosevelt stumped." And it's a dull day when interest isn't rewarded by something new.

After the opening day's session, Mrs. O'Day spoke right out and said her first impression of the House was one of "complete confusion." She said she'd always thought men kept better order. Letters rained in upon her from like-minded folk, who suggested some feminine housekeeping was needed to keep order in the House.

Mrs. O'Day, born in the South, issued as her first "press statement" a strongly phrased indorsement of the anti-lynching bill. A few days later, she announced the first measure she would introduce would be the former Griffin bill, providing that religious views or philosophical opinions against war shall not debar aliens from citizenship.

Has Faith in President.

Sponsorship of that same bill won for the late Representative Griffin a biography in "The Red Network," a book which calls itself a "Who's Who of Radicalism." Mrs. O'Day isn't listed.

Mrs. O'Day met a query as to whether she would be a "rubber stamp" with the serene reply:

"I might be a yes woman at Washington because I have such faith in Mr. Roosevelt and the good sense of his Administration."

What absorbs her most, of course, is the social security program, for her hobby has been welfare.

Given Place She Coveted.

Mrs. O'Day won one of her heart's desires when she was placed on the Immigration Committee. She worked long and hard last year on an Ellis Island committee, appointed by Labor Secretary Frances Perkins, her friend. This committee submitted 18 pages of recommendations at the end of a 149-page report as to what should be done about immigration laws in general and Ellis Island in particular. It got down to such details as suggesting that aliens be told why they were being detained, "so that the alien may know what issue it is he has to meet" and that "a more modern literacy test be substituted for the present practice of submitting Biblical texts."

"Nothing resulted from that report because no spade work had been done," said Mrs. O'Day, adding that she saw in her assignment a chance to arouse the Immigration Committee's interest in the Ellis Island committee's recommendations.

Experts Tell How to Utilize Cheaper Meat

(Associated Press.)

RISING MEAT bills of the family budget have prompted the Bureau of Home Economics to issue a bulletin of ideas for using the cheaper cuts. Because of the drought last summer, and for other reasons, there is more lean meat on the market and fewer steaks and roasts with thick rims of fat. The situation calls for more skill in cooking.

When meat has very little fat, say bureau food experts, cooking rules must be modified. To veal and to very lean beef, lamb, or pork, whether tender or not, add fat for richness and cook as braised steak and chops, oven-braised meat, pot roast or stews. Braising and pot roasts are really "sisters" in the realm of cookery. They are two of the very best ways of making lean, tough meat taste tender.

Savory seasonsings can add zest to many meat dishes which cost little. The following seasonings are good with meat: onions, sage, thyme, leaf savory, bay leaf, mint leaves, parsley, celery tops (fresh or dried), celery seed, caraway, cloves, pepper, paprika, curry, grated horseradish, tabasco sauce, and garlic buttons.

General rules for cooking demand that all meat cook slowly, under a moderate temperature most of the time. Meat is protein food, and like whites of eggs is toughened by prolonged heating at high temperatures. To make meat savory, brown it to develop the flavor and then cook it at a moderate temperature the rest of the time.

The tender cuts are beef roasts and steaks from the rib and loin, all cuts of lamb and pork, and generally all cuts of veal. The less tender cuts are beef chuck, brisket, plate, rump, round and flank.

You're the Top Contest Closes, Another Begun

Tiny of the Shoreham Now Wants Parodies on 'Anything Goes.'

By Kay Ware.

Tiny, who was not satisfied with some 85 contributions of "You're the Top," plans another contest for parodies on "Anything Goes." He thinks the prize should be two Shoreham champagne cocktails for the winner—and one for Tiny.

The "You're the Top" contest closed with a bang when Archie Byrd sent in two verses, six choruses and two more choruses in French. Byrd wrote Tiny a letter to the effect that he had seen the contest announcement one morning and sent his contributions the same night. Fast work. Here is one of his French choruses:

"You're le top,
You're la fleur d'oranger.
You're le top.
You're les sales etranger.
You're les poletees tiges de l'histo-
rique Mistinguette,
You're a *Pairl Wheet soire
Vous etiez Poiret
You're Crepe Suzette.
You're l'amour,
You're elan du Can-can,
You're les jours,
D'Isadora Duncan.
Je suis inutileamais c'pendant il me
semble
Que, si, Bebe, moi, j'suis nil
Toi, t'est le comble."
*Freely translated, Pearl White.

Be it understood that Mr. Byrd won his two cocktails on the strength of all his lyrics, not only this one.

You're the Hudson River.
You're the top,
And you're joie de vivre.
You're the goal
You're an airplane take-off,
You're the roll
In a banker's rake-off.
I'm a carbon knock, like an Insull stock I'll drop—
But if, Baby, I'm the bottom, you're the top.

Tiny explains that many verses were eliminated because of imperfect rhyme or meter. If you want hints on "Anything Goes," listen to some of his parodies.

Chain-Store Levy Asked In Gas Trade

Cordish Bill Would Include Oil Stations in Present Act.

Fight Likely on Proposal 48-Hour Marriage Law Urged.

Annapolis, Jan. 24 (AP).—A measure blanketing gasoline filling and automobile service stations under the State chain store license law, introduced today in the Legislature, may result in one of the hardest battles of the session.

Delegate Paul L. Cordish (Democrat), Fourth Baltimore, sent the bill to the desk in the House just before the Legislature adjourned until 8 p. m., Tuesday. He declared that its enactment would bring in at least $100,000 additional revenue to the State annually.

The chain store license law, passed by the 1933 session after a bitter legislative battle, requires the payment of a license fee of $5 for each store up to 5; $20 for each store from 5 to 10; $100 for each store from 10 to 20 and $150 for each store over 20. After its passage the bill was held constitutional by the courts.

During its course through the legislative mill, filing and service stations were eliminated from its provisions. Cordish's measure would put them under the act.

Discussing the measure after its introduction, Cordish asserted pressure had been brought to bear to keep the bill out of the Legislature. He said that some oil companies have more than 100 filling stations.

The bill was referred to the ways and means committee. Under the usual procedure any opposition will assert itself by a request for a hearing on behalf of the opponents.

During today's session, 16 bills and a resolution, mostly local in nature, were introduced in the two legislative chambers. A joint resolution was passed requesting President Roosevelt to address the Legislature "at his convenience."

The most important bills presented were:

Would Change Marriage Law.

Requiring couples desiring to marry in the State to wait 48 hours from the time of applying for the license and to submit a certificate with the application showing they are not afflicted with any contagious disease. The sale of merchandise in connection with the issuance of licenses is prohibited. The bill is designed to break up "Gretna Green" marriages.

Making a version of "Maryland, My Maryland," written by the late John T. White, former president of the Maryland State Teachers Association, the State song. A bill is now before the Legislature making "Maryland, My Maryland," as composed by John Ryder Randall in 1831 the State song.

Two bills designed to prevent honorary members of the State organized militia from being exempted from jury duty. Ratifying the child labor amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Would Bar Special Counsel.

Requiring the bank commissioner, when acting as a receiver, to obtain advice from the Attorney General or his assistants, and prohibiting him from employing special counsel.

The Senate found time during the short session to stage a heated debate over a motion to recommit a resolution, sponsored by Senator Robert Kimble (Democrat), Allegany, requiring the bank commissioner to furnish information relative to the operation of small loan companies.

While Senator Kimble was absent from the chamber preparing an amendment, the roll was called and the bill was recommitted by a 13-to-12 vote. His presence would have tied the ballot.

Amendment Prepared.

The resolution came out of the insurance and loans committee with a favorable report, but Senator Joseph L. Donovan (Democrat), Howard, moved that it be recommitted. Senator J. Allan Coad (Democrat), St. Marys, pointed out that it did not specify to whom the commissioner should make the report. Senator Kimble went out to prepare an amendment requiring the report be made to the Senate.

The Senate adopted a favorable report on a bill by Senator Miller (Republican), Washington County, authorizing the construction of a new school building at Sharpsburg and an addition to the school at Sandy Hook. The bill provides a bond issue of $90,000 for the building program.

Loudoun Snow Shuts Schools, Buries a Train

8-Foot Depth Is Reported; Train Turns Back; Section Isolated.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Loudoun County tonight was shoveling out of the worst snowstorm in 20 years. Fully 18 inches fell and drifts are reported on the highways in some places 8 feet deep. The western end of the county was almost entirely isolated from the world. Only through radios and telephone can it learn conditions elsewhere. The Washington and Old Dominion train reached Leesburg about noon today, but could go no farther.

The Washington-Winchester bus, after going as far as the Clarke Gap Mountain, was forced to return due to deep drifts. Two buses caught in the snowstorm were marooned tonight between Purcellsville and Bluemont. One W. & O. D. train was entirely buried in the snow near Bluemont. A number of the rural schools were closed today and town schools operating had only a half attendance. F. M. Yellott, resident highway engineer, worked night and day shifts to open the highways, which the high winds are still filling with snow.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 23 (Spl.).—Although all trunk-line routes entering this city were opened sufficiently to permit traffic today, highway officials tonight expressed concern over the prospect of a traffic blockade. Strong winds were forecast.

Clearing of highways went forward with difficulty today because of the weight of the snow, which resulted in several snow plows breaking down. A number of minor accidents have been reported.

Buses were reported arriving about an hour late from all directions.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 24 (Spl.). A 9-inch snowfall today blanketed Waynesboro and southern Franklin County. It was the heaviest fall in several years. Subfreezing temperatures made highways icy and vehicular traffic was slowed up. Buses were reported late yesterday, but were on schedule today.

In an effort to eliminate possibility of sledding accidents, Dr. J. W. Croft, burgess, issued an edict to police and coasters that Church street and King street will be roped off for use of sledders only until after the snow melts. Persons caught sledding on other streets will be prosecuted.

Flood waters in southern West Virginia receded last night and many highways were again open to automobile traffic, while the road commission's snow plows cleared the roads in the eastern panhandle of a 15-inch snowfall, according to the Associated Press.

Clarksburg had a low temperature of 9 under zero. Beckley reported 6 below and Elkins 4 below, with slight rises during the day. In some sections, telephone communication was disrupted as the cold snapped wires.

Parents Speed 60 Miles in Snow To Save Son, 6

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.). An anxious mother and father of Harrisonburg, aided by police officials of that city, last night rushed their 6-year-old son over 60 miles of snow-swept and ice-covered highways to cross a mountain range in the season's most severe storm and save their child from a death by possible strangulation.

Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Stoop and a Harrisonburg police official manned a fast car, took an ax and other tools to clear the highways of fallen trees and snow, and sped across the top of the Blue Ridge, while little Noland Stoop lay with a jackrock lodged in his throat.

Overcoming all obstacles, they brought the child to specialists at University Hospital, who removed the object from his throat in the early morning hours. The youngster swallowed the jackrock late yesterday while playing at home.

Fugitives would have had little difficulty eluding Town Sergt. Webb Lambert of Newmarket yesterday if it had been necessary for him to chase them in his car. Lambert, on top of the machine, is directing Clinton Stewart in the work of digging it out of the 13-inch snow.

Dam Committee Will Meet Today

$1,500,000 Savage River Work to Be Discussed.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 24 (Spl.). A meeting of a newly appointed committee to draw legislation for a proposed $1,500,000 dam on the Savage River in Garrett County, has been called by Mayor George W. Legge, chairman, for tomorrow afternoon in the city hall.

Abel Wolman, State engineer for the Public Works Administration, appointed the committee, including Mayor Legge, chairman; John P. Cornwell, general counsel of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and former Governor of West Virginia; Thomas B. Finan, local financier; A. Charles Stewart, president of Allegany County commissioners; Henry Shriver, local banker; Matthew O'Brien, general counsel for the Celanese Corporation of America, and Lewis M. Wilson, city solicitor of Cumberland.

In making the appointments Wolman said the proposed dam will regulate the flow of the Potomac River from Luke to Cumberland. Enough water would be stored in the huge reservoir during the winter to be released during the summer droughts and stabilize the volume of water available in the section for industrial purposes.

Fire Department Honored at Luray

50 Members Are Guests at a Banquet.

Luray, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Fifty members of the Luray Fire Department were feted last night at Brown's restaurant. The orator was J. Everett Will, Luray attorney. The toastmaster was Amos E. Bradley, head of a drum corps, one of the auxiliaries of the Luray Fire Department.

Cecil C. Campbell, chief of the department, made an address reciting the achievements of the company. Records show that the Luray Fire Department within the past year has saved property estimated to be worth $50,000. The organization not only works in Luray but in four magisterial districts of Page County.

Almost 50 of the Women's Auxiliary of the Luray Fire Department participated in the banquet. Among others who made addresses were Richard Zirkle, secretary of the department, and Arthur L. Yates.

Penal Farm Bars Visitors.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 24 (Spl.). Because of the outbreak of influenza here, visitors have been barred from the Maryland penal farm at Roxbury, near here, until it has subsided.

Along the Tri-State Trail

With C. B. Carr

Post State Editor.

A TWENTY-SEVEN-YEAR-OLD French automobile with 324,000 miles of uninterrupted service is now making a 5,000-mile tour of the South to route tourists through the Shenandoah Valley this spring. Its owner, H. M. Tschudy, contends "it hasn't a rattle and runs as smoothly as the day it was bought in 1908."

The car was brought to America by Baron Rosencrantz and was driven by him until his death last year. Tschudy bought the venerable machine for $20 and immediately spent $600 for repairs. Since then he has been offered many times that amount.

The trip is being sponsored by interests from Winchester, Endless Caverns, New Market, Lewisburg, W. Va., and Roanoke.

The first 50 years in the practice of law are the hardest, according to a bill introduced in the West Virginia Legislature by Delegate Claude R. Linger, of Braxton County.

The measure provides that any person who has practiced law for 50 years in the peace courts of the State may be admitted to practice in the circuit courts of the State.

This department has heard of such odd food products as rattlesnake meat being canned. Now comes a report from Richmond that a local brewery there is canning beer.

Introducing beer in this form at a "world premiere," brewery officials explained that the cans will be "keg lined" and will have an advantage over the bottle beer, because they require no deposit for the container, which is thrown away after being opened.

Straw hats, Easter bonnets and all other harbingers of spring may be a long way off, but fishermen of the Northern Neck of Virginia are already setting out their poles and nets for the spring season when shad and herring begin their annual runs.

A commission has been chosen to settle the century-old question of the true course of the boundary separating Shenandoah and Frederick Counties, Va.

State to Ask York Bridge Lead Works

Would Pay for Itself, Federal Government Will Be Told.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 24 (AP).—The proposed $2,000,000 suspension bridge across the York River at Yorktown will head the State highway department's list of work projects to be submitted to the Federal Government for the contemplated new public works program, Commissioner H. G. Shirley said today.

Mr. Shirley said a long list of road and bridge construction projects would be submitted, but this bridge would be the most important single item.

"The Yorktown Bridge is a highly practicable project, and would pay for itself in a very short time," he said. "It undoubtedly would tremendously increase the traffic on the Tidwater Trail route and would be a big thing for at least five counties now making constant use of the Gloucester Point-Yorktown ferry."

Once Met Refusal.

The bridge was strongly urged on the Public Works Administration about a year ago, but was not accepted at that time. Mr. Shirley said he did not know whether the Colonial National Monument authorities, who previously opposed the project, would continue to fight it, but that he saw no reason why a bridge in keeping with the colonial architecture at Yorktown could not be constructed.

"We could design the towers of the bridge to have a Georgian appearance harmonizing with other colonial structures in Yorktown," he said.

Tentative plans call for a single suspension type of bridge with a clearance of 135 feet over the surface of the river, which would allow the tallest ship to pass under with ease.

Protests Discounted.

Discussing other bridge projects, he said that while the present James River Bridge is slow in paying for itself, he believed a bridge across the mouth of Hampton Roads would be entirely practicable and would pay for itself and the present James River Bridge as well. He said such a bridge could be built with a clearance of 150 feet and since the tallest ships are not more than 90 feet in height, he did not consider objections of shipyard officials and port authorities to this bridge valid.

The highway department still is at work on the list of projects requested today by Col. James A. Anderson, State PWA engineer.

Virginia Sets June 7 As Filing Deadline

Democratic Aspirants for Assembly Instructed.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 24 (AP).—Candidates for the Democratic nomination to the Virginia House of Delegates and the State Senate in the primary of August 6 must have their notices of candidacy filed with the district chairman 60 days prior to that date, or June 7.

There are some exceptions to the general law in some of the house and senatorial districts whereby the filing deadline is earlier, but, as a general rule, June 7 is the deadline fixed by law, and announced today by Col. Peter Saunders, secretary of the Commonwealth.

The entire membership of the General Assembly comes up for reelection this year. Most of the districts will nominate by primary, but some are contemplating conventions.

The primary fights this year will be confined to localities and districts. None of the officers subjected to to State-wide campaigns come up for relection.

Besides members of the General Assembly, other local officers in many localities will come up for nomination in the primary.

Doctor Revives Woman 'Dead' For Five Hours

Big Laurel, Va., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Dr. Howard D. Bolling came down from the isolated region in the Pound River country with a strange tale of death and "resurrection," the latter due to his timely arrival.

Dr. Bolling said he was walking along a backwoods road when he heard moaning at a house he was about to pass. A small boy came along and he asked of him the cause of the crying and was told that a young Mrs. Mullins had taken suddenly ill and died that morning. "They are makin' her coffin over there at the stable," the boy volunteered, pointing at a small log building set near the house.

Dr. Bolling decided to investigate and ascertain, if possible, the cause of death. He was met at the door by a woman who told him Mrs. Mullins had always been healthy and "she was sitting there laughing and talking with her husband when suddenly she just keeled over."

The body was "laid out" on some boards which rested on two chairs. Dr. Bolling asked permission to examine the body. He discovered it still warm, although she had been "dead" five hours. With the help of the woman he turned the body over and began massaging the spine. In two hours the woman was able to sit up. Her husband insisted that he stay the night and he accepted the invitation and next morning the revived woman cooked his breakfast. When the doctor left her she remarked that she never felt better in her life.

Robb Named Counsel for Kelly-Springfield Plant.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 24 (Spl.). The Circuit Court of Allegany County yesterday appointed Thomas B. Finan, of Cumberland, receiver for the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company in Maryland, in place of John P. McGuire, resigned. Edmund S. Burke and Daniel O'Regan are the other receivers in this State. Former State Senator David A. Robb was named counsel for the receivers.

Some time ago, Mr. Finan represented minority stockholders in an effort to effect a reorganization of the plant.

Trial Justice Can't Order Lunacy Writ

Reverses the Lower Tribunal, Upholds Staples.

Richmond, Jan. 24 (AP).—Reversing a lower court in Staunton, and upholding a ruling by Attorney General A. P. Staples, the Virginia Supreme Court today held that the new trial justice act makes no provision for trial justices acting on a commission of lunacy, and that this function still is to be performed by the justices of the peace.

The appellate court made no reference to approximately 600 cases involved since the trial justice act became effective July 1, but dealt entirely with cases to be handled in the future. It held that the justice of the peace and not the trial justice is to sit on lunacy commissions with the physicians named by the justice of the peace.

The opinion definitely asserted that justices of the peace, along with the circuit court and the corporation court judges, have the same authority in lunacy matters that they had before the enactment of the trial justice law by the 1934 General Assembly, and that trial justices are not given authority to act in this respect.

The case originated on application of Frank G. Thompson, sheriff of Bath County, for a writ of mandamus to compel Dr. J. S. Dejarnett, superintendent of the Western State Hospital at Staunton, to receive a person committed by a lunacy commission composed of a justice of the peace and two physicians.

Contrary to an opinion by the Attorney General the Staunton court held that trial justices were eligible to sit on lunacy commission cases. Subsequently the Attorney General suggested that the judge of the corporation or circuit court sit instead of either the trial justice or the justice of the peace until the question could be definitely determined. The Attorney General agreed with the Staunton court that the intent of the law was to substitute trial justices for justices of the peace in these cases, but asserted this was not provided by the letter of the law.

3 Hunted Here In Killing of 2

'Break' Predicted in Car Barn Slaying as Inquiry Reaches Capital.

Search for the murderers of James Mitchell and Emory Smith, Capital Transit Co. employes, at the Chevy Chase Lake car barn last Monday, was extended to Washington last night as Montgomery County authorities announced they were seeking "three District men" in the case.

No description of the suspects was made public by officials, who are being aided in their investigation by Metropolitan Police.

"This is all we can say right now, but we think a 'break' in solving the killing is near," one of the investigators said last night.

Tribe Alone Troubled by Catching

All Other League Clubs Solve Backstopping Problems.

Veteran Steve O'Neill to Take 4 Candidates of Tribe Under Wing.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (AP).—All the American League clubs except the Cleveland Indians have written their catching departments off the list of 1935 problems. Manager Walter Johnson figures a 100-game receiver would just about make his ball club possibly mean Cleveland's first pennant since 1920.

None of these is to be had from the other clubs, according to the Associated Press, so Johnson has assigned the veteran Steve O'Neill the task of developing one from among the four catchers to whom the Indians hold title.

O'Neill Well Qualified.

O'Neill was obtained from Toledo ostensibly to work on the Indians' young pitchers. However, it looks as if his first job will be to groom Frankie Pytlak, GGlenn Myatt, Bill Brenzel and Charles George and try to make one of them as proficient as he himself was 15 years ago.

Only four American League catchers passed the century mark in games worked last year. They were Mickey Cochrane, Manager of the Detroit Tigers; Rick Ferrell, of the Red Sox; Rolly Hemsley, of the Browns and Bill Dickey, of the Yankees. Ferrell caught 128 games.

The other clubs are more or less set bhind the bat. Cochrane intends to do the major part of the backstopping for the Tigers. Dickey, Ferrell and Hemsley will be the No. 1 men for the Yanks, Red Sox and Browns.

Mack's Shift Praised.

Connie Mack's move in shifting Jimmy Foxx behind the plate for the Athletics is being applauded by baseball men who predict the slugging Jimmy will be real tops as a catcher.

The Chicago White Sox believe they solved their problem by acquiring the veteran Luke Sewell in a three-cornered deal with the Browns and Washington and Manager Bucky Harris says young Cliff Bolton will more than meet the Senator's needs, both defensively and with his big bat.

Browns Sign Melillo, Put on Block Last Fall

St. Louis, Jan. 24 (AP).—The signed contract of Oscar Melillo, St. Louis Browns' second baseman, was received today by the club.

The Browns put their infield star on the trading block at the close of last season in an effort to land several young players. There were several cash offers, rejected by Manager Rogers Hornsby, who explained "you can't play a stack of bills on second base."

Fate of Blue Ridge League Up Sunday

Meeting Will Be Held at Frederick; Winchester Club Withdraws.

FREDERICK, Md., Jan. 24 (Spl.).—Whether the Blue Ridge Baseball League, comprised last year of Frederick, Winchester, Hagerstown, Martinsburg and Chambersburg, will function this year in organized baseball circles, will be determined at a meeting of league officials and sports writers here Sunday. Joseph F. Carr, Columbus, Ohio, promotional director of the National Federation of Professional Baseball Leagues, will attend the meeting.

The league's plans were given a setback yesterday when Charles D. Ehrhart, owner of the Winchester club, announced that the Virginia town would not be represented this year. He said financial support he anticipated was noth forthcoming. At the same time, Frank Colley, Hagerstown, president of the league, announced the Eddie Collins, general manager of the Boston Red Sox, was not interested in the purchase of the Hagerstown club franchise since the league contemplates playing only three days each week. Colley interested Collins in the Hagerstown club recently, but the Boston manager sent word yesterday that he had two other Class D leagues under consideration and would give them preference on account of playing six games a week.

Two Clubs Interested.

Reports are that two major league clubs, the Cleveland Indians and Pittsburgh Pirates, are interested in backing the Frederick club. Several years ago the Cleveland management backed the local club for a season, but turned down a proposition several weeks ago to sponsor the team again. Since, however, Billy Evans has informed Dr. Ira J. McCurdy, a director of the Frederick club, that he would entertain a proposition to lend aid. Pittsburgh, through its local scout, Carlton Molesworth, has offered financial assistance.

Martinsburg has a major league backer which it will announce at Sunday's meeting. Tom ullinger, principal backer of the Chambersburg club, is dickering with the Cincinnati Reds and New York Yankees for support.

J. Vincent Jamison, Hagerstown, for many years president of the old Blue Ridge League, will attend the meeting, which will be preceded by a dinner at Hotel Frederick.

Twenty Grand And Mate in Test Today

Clash in Sprint Race for Santa Anita Handicap Candidates.

ARCADIA, Calif., Jan. 24 (U.P.).—A. C. Bostwick's Mate and the Greentree Stable's Twenty Grand, two of the leading candidates for the Santa Anita Handicap here February 23, will clash tomorrow in the Bay Cities Handicap, a 7-furlong test especially arranged for eligibles to the February classic.

Only four eligibles accepted conditions for the Bay Cities event, sixth race of tomorrow's program at Santa Anita. The others accepting were Teralice and High Glee.

This will be the first American test for Mate since its return from a winning campaign on English tracks, and the first race for Twenty Grand, 1931 Kentucky Derby winner, since the fall of 1932.

Head Play Works Fast.

Mrs. Silas B. Mason's Head Play, winner of the Pimlico Preakness in 1933, turned in the best workout of the large number of Santa Anita handicap candidates which were sent through their paces today. The 5-year-old son of My Play dashed 6 furlongs in the fast time of 1:12 under a snug hold.

The Greentree Stable's Gillie was best of the three eligibles which exercised over the mile route. The Victorian colt was rated well throughout, and was clocked in 1:42 under a breeze. Top Row, hard held all the way, covered the same distance in 1:43 1-5 easily, while Alex Gordon's Sir Thomas required 1:45 3-5.

Thomasville, Mr. Khayyam, Pillow Fight, Indiantown and Precursor were the other candidates out for exercise and were given short speed tests in mediocre time.

New Orleans, Jan. 24 (AP).—Mount Washington, 5-year-old sprinter from the stable of D. Sodders, today scored a length victory in the fifth race at the Fair Grounds to pay $12.60 for a $2 ticket. It was the feature of an ordinary card.

Away slowly in the 6-furlong sprint, Mount Washington made up four lengths from the head of the stretch to lead Ben Coli and Lady Rockledge to the wire. Double Nugget, well favored after the withdrawal of Rizla, was well up in the early running, but failed to last.

School Fives In 2 Games Today

By John R. Vosburgh.

A COUPLE of storm scenes, packing enough whirl-wind action to make a January blizzard look like a June zephyr, swept into the interhigh basket ball picture today—one flinging Eastern and Tech into battle at Roosevelt, and the other tossing Central at Western on the Tech floor.

With both games starting at 3:30 p. m., the fans find it a choice between some fast basket ball and warm rivalry on the one hand and some warm rivalry and fast basket ball on the other, with the Eastern-Tech fracas beckoning a trifle more attractively.

Favorite to win the championship at the series opening, the Techmen have already stumbled in defeat while seeing the defending champions from Eastern romp to the lead by winning all three of their games. The Maroon faces the task today of either stopping the careening Blue team or watch it pull away to what will amount to an insurmountable lead.

Tech Rules Favorite.

Despite the records, Tech has shown itself strong enough at top form to topple the fast-traveling Lincoln Parkers, and on that basis rules the favorite to win.

Equally as serious a task faces Central in its game with Western. A Western victory would put the Mount Pleasanters permanently out of the running, as well as make the Red team virtuallly an even choice to win the title. Victors over Tech and beaten only by Eastern in a close, hard-fought tussle, the Georgetowners go into the game bigger favorites to win than Tech over Eastern.

The latter engagement promises to furnish not only a top-notch team fight, but also a brilliant encounter between the two ace players of the city—Capt. Levelle Dean, of Eastern, and Capt. Reds Daly, of Tech.

Has Scored 46 Points.

Dean is in the midst of the craziest point-manufacturing streak in the series history, having tallied 46 points in three games to lead in the individual scoring by a wide margin. Daly's 31 points are good enough for the runner-up honors. Today's game should serve to clarify the comparative talents of the two stars.

Coach Artie Boyd, of Tech, is not planning on covering Dean with any particular man, preferring to retain his zone system of defense, which he feels will keep the Eastern star fairly well under cover. Coach Charlie Guyon, of Eastern, on the other hand, is putting one man on Daly from start to finish.

Due to Daly's size, Buddy Shaner, Eastern center, is a strong possibility to get the assignment, but the Eastern coach was undecided yesterday whether it would be Shaner, Charlie Scheible, former forward, now playing guard; Chick Hollidge or Chick Colley. It will not be Dean, Guyon said.

Morning Basket Ball! Eastern vs. Riordan

Basket ball begins at 10 o'clock in the morning for Eastern High School Saturday. The Lincoln Parkers will inaugurate a new venture in the game when they face the powerful Riordan Prep five of Highland, N. Y., in one of the few morning games ever played by a local high school on its regular schedule.

Raymond Riordan, head of the visiting school, is an old chum of Principal Charles M. Hart of Eastern. He was formerly in charge of the night school system here. Eastern's championship team last year beat Riordan, 21 to 20.

The coaches and teams representing the other high schools of Washington have been invited to see the game and to a luncheon to follow in the Eastern dining hall.

'35 President's Cup Regatta Set in Fall

September 28-29 Assigned as Dates for Annual Classic Here.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (Spl.).—The President's Cup Regatta, Washington's outstanding speed boat event, was definitely assigned the dates of September 28 and 29 at a meeting of the American Power Boat Association here today.

The President's Cup Regatta, the feature of which is a 45-mile contest between Gold Cup boats, has been growing in national importance for the last two or three years. Last year, when the feature race was won by George Reis' perennial champion, El Lagarto, the regatta had become one of the outstanding competitions of its kind in the country.

The lifting of restrictions on Gold Cup craft to include 12-liter power boats generally is expected to result in larger fields and much greater speed in the President's Cup race. A new feature, added last year, was the American speed boat championship, which will form a part of all feature regattas.

All Dates Assigned.

Dates for all regattas for the next eight months weer assigned at the meeting of the A. P. B. A. The schedule will open at Jacksonville, Fla., February 9-10 and will close with a meet at Baltimore September 19-21. Florida is allotted the first seven meets of the year.

Bethesda Five, Rockville in Title Tilt

'Crucial' League Game Is Scheduled for Today; Odds Are Even.

THE battle that wil decide the Montgomery County court crown will take place at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School at 3:30 p. m., today when the best Rockville team in half a decade clashes with the Lelanders.

Winner of its last eight battles and defeated only once this season, Rockville is an even favorite to win over the hosts, who have scored nine victories in eleven starts. The Bethesdans are undefeated in county competition since Silver Spring defeated them in 1932.

Rockville numbers five county opponents among its victims, all by one-sided scores, and the Bethesdans have won three, scoring 170 points to their opponents' 46 in the three battles.

Other Games Easy.

The remainder of the county schedules for these clubs looms easy on the basis of past performances.

Gene Ochsenreiter, of the invaders, has yet to be stopped, averaging 12.50 points per game, while Lodge, of the Bethesdans, is on his heels for league individual honors. The battle between them is likely to decide the issue.

Bethesda was stoped this week by Eastern, but the reserves played more than half the contest between Eastern's first stringers, bowing, 33 to 18. Rockville has not met defeat since December, losing in the last quarter on the St. Alban's court.

Gallaudet Five To Play C. U. Tonight

Cards Are Favored to Win as Series Is Renewed for 32d Time.

A MOSS-COVERED relic of the days when college rivals were all that the word implies will be polished up and placed on public display again tonight at Brookland, where Catholic U. and Gallaudet meet in the 32d renewal of their basket ball series.

As usual—since '10, '15 or thereabouts when Gallaudet was a power in local sports—Catholic U. will enter the fray a prohibitive favorite to do everything, but outbattle its opponent. The Cards seem to be in stride after an uncertain start and should hurdle Gallaudet easily.

Gallaudet will line-up with Higgins and Ellerhorst, forwards Burnett, center; Kuglitsch and Ewan or Goodin, guards. Catholic's line-up is Schmarr and Augusterfer, forwards; Lieb, center; Gearty and Roseneld, guards.

A preliminary game will be staged by the Cardinal Frosh, who play host to the Boys Club of Washington at 715.

Young Boxer May Revive Division

Victory Would About Make Him Uncrowned World Champ.

Chief Feather in His Cap Is Recent Battering Given Yarosz.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (AP).—The battling bellhop, Henry Pylkowski, better known as Eddie (Babe) Risko, pops into Madison Square Garden tomorrow night with the immediate future of the middleweight division resting on his shoulders.

He tackles Vince Dundee, smart, clever old wheelhorse of the 160 pounders, a former champion, in the main ten-round bout, and victory for the handsome young walloper from the upper reaches of New York State not only should revive a comatose division, but would just about establish him as the uncrowned champion of the world.

Only 22 Years Old.

Risko, only 22 years old and unheard of a month ago, demonstrated that he has punching power—the necessary lifting ingredient—when he came out of Syracuse actually and figuratively to flatten Teddy Yarosz, middleweight champion, in seven rounds in Scranton, Pa., on New Year's Day. He knocked down Yarosz six times before the champion and all his handlers agreed that enough was enough. Yarosz got $1,500 in addition to his whipping, Babe got the biggest purse he has ever earned, $217, and a chance in the Garden.

Make Weight Easily.

Dundee, who lost his title to Yarosz, but proved his comeback ability with a clear-cut victory over Paul Pirrone, in Philadelphia recently, is an 8-to-5 favorite, but that doesn't seem to bother the young Polish-Lithuanian-American, who started his wage-earning as a bellhop in a Syracuse hotel.

Both Dundee and Risko make 160 pounds easily, though Babe was forced to come in at 162, two over the class limit, to put the nontitle stamp on his match with Yarosz.

Risko's record shows that he has fought 21 times, has lost only twice, and until he collided with Yarosz never had faced a warrior of note. He wound up his training yesterday as a featured attraction in a department store.

Adm. Grayson's Pocket Wins Third Race in Row at Hialeah

Filly Jumps Into Lead in Stretch

Paradisical Is Second; Basquine Disappoints After Spurt.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Writer).

HIALEAH RACE TRACK, Jan. 24.—A distinct Washington flavor was added to today's program at this racing paradise when Admiral Cary T. Grayson, of the Capital, sent his colors postward on Pocket, a game filly, and she won the first division of the Wildwood, the split feature. In taking her third straight race, Pocket ran the mile course in 1:38 3-5, fast time, and led Paradisical and Chief Mourner to the judges' stand.

The daughter of Rock Pocket, capably ridden by Wayne Wright, stayed close to the fast pace set by Paradisical until reaching the stretch, where she answered her jockey's call for speed and drew away. Chief Mourner loomed menacingly at the eighth pole, but was in tight quarters.

Basquine Disappoints.

The big disappointment of the race was Basquine, which broke more alertly than usual. This well-played filly coasted back through the field when the real test came. Pocket was the third favorite to win and paid $4.90.

The second division of the race, designed as a tryout for the Florida Derby, went to Stegal, from the stable of E. F. Seagram, the Canadian. The seven-crown horse, far back during the first part, found an opening along the rail and Jockey Litzenberger drove him through. The gelding held a four-length lead at the wire. Stavka and Cristate were closest of the others in the seven-horse field.

18,000 See Program.

The weather was what is known hereabouts as "Hialeah delight." It was too chilly for bathing or even beach lounging and the crowd swelled to 18,000 instead of the usual 15,000. A warm sun was fighting a losing battle with the cold blasts from the north.

Making the second start of his career, Thruster, an odds-on favorite, graduated from the maiden ranks in the opener, although he gave his many backers a few anxious moments. Thruster was fourth at the three-sixteenths pole, but Jockey Stout bounced him along. The juvenile jumped into the lead and was eased up at the finish. Dandy Jay and Volgadale followed the winner, a $3.10 betting proposition.

Candescent Winner.

Candescent, trained by Willie Denham, of Washington, decided the second race with a stretch rush that carried her away from Genteel Lady and Donny Black, to pay a $5.50 mutuel and registered victory No. 2 for the favorite players.

A first time starter, Recovery, gave the favorite players the chills in the third race, leading Idle Victory, the public choice, and Diverting to the all-important finish under a powerful ride by Jockey Litzenberger. The daughter of Sickle paid $22.

The B. B. Stable's Noble Spirit won the sixth at a $21.10 mutuel, and the final, run over the turf course, went to Shot and Shell, which drew away from Just American. The latter looked best, but was poorly ridden by Wright.

3-Year-Old Play Book Takes Third Straight

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 24 (AP).—Play Book, Mrs. E. M. Hector's bay gelding, scored his third consecutive victory at Alamo Downs since January 1 today as he galloped to a length victory in the fifth race, a 6-furlong sprint for 3-year-olds.

With only six others in the field, Play Book paid $7 for each $2 ticket. He carried 114 pounds, only one less than top weight for the event.

DANDY JAY moved up rapidly in stretch and was next best. VOLGADALE closed ground gamely in stretch. MOUNT LOOKOUT displayed good speed, but weakened fast after running six furlongs. SHOT GUN is worth noting.

CANDESCENT had to be much the best to win. She was forced to go very wide around turn, but closed fast. GENTEEL LADY was eased back off the pace around turn, then went up on outside, but weakened in last sixteenth. DONNY BLACK ran a good race. PEACE TREATY closed a big gap. STAROGAN ran well for five furlongs. FLOWERY went in the air at the start.

RECOVERY, showing good speed, was hustled along from the start, ran into lead in final sixteenth and outsamed IDLE VICTORY. The latter was badly shut off entering stretch and boy had to take up. She closed very fast. DIVERTING broke slow and trailed far back for half a mile, came on and finished gamely. SQUEEZE OUT was hard ridden all the way. OVALETTE ran a fair race.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000. The Wildwood. For 3-year-olds. Start good, won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:51. Off at 3:55. Winner, Cary T. Grayson's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—POCKET, $4.90, $3.20, $2.60; PARADISICAL, $5.00, $3.60; CHIEF MOURNER, $3.80.

POCKET much the best. She broke well, but was pocketed on the rail to the turn out of the back stretch, when boy took to the outside the filly closed fast and won going away. PARADISICAL displayed keen speed, rushed to the front and held on gamely. CHIEF MOURNER is a good-looking filly and is sure to improve over this effort. BASQUINE will up from behind a mile. Then dropped back. HYMARQUE had speed for three furlongs. TEAROUT was never a factor.

FIFTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000. The Wildwood (second division). For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:21½. Off at 4:23. Winner, E. F. STEGAL, going in much improved form, displayed good speed, ran up and into lead on inside, drew out in final furlong and won nicely in hand. STAVKA, away well, was kept well up all the way, but tired in last sixteenth. CRISTATE was well up to the middle of the turn, where he was pinched back, recovered and finished fast. BETHLEHEM STAR came from far back. STICKHANDLE had early speed. THISWAY ran good race and should win soon.

SHOT AND SHELL, showing a decided liking for the turf course, rushed into long lead and galloped his field dizzy, winning easily. JUST AMERICAN was hustled along from the start, held on well. STEP AWAY was stout factor from the start and appears to like the grass course. CAPT. JERRY ran good race. CURACAO was unable to close any ground. MURMURING closed a big gap.

Wheat Closes Mixed With Corn at Peak

Cotton Prices Irregular; Closes Unchanged to 3 Points Higher.

Chicago, Jan. 24 (AP).—Larger demand for immediate delivery corn helped put some backbone into grain values late today, with white corn bringing the highest premium yet this season.

More or less of a stimulus to rallying power in the corn market was an authoritative statement that there is a domestic corn shortage of 320,000,000 bushels. On the other hand, much spread trading that consisted of selling of corn against purchases of wheat caused the May delivery of corn to drop at one time today to the lowest price since November 19.

Corn closed firm at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜ higher; May, 84¾-84⅞; wheat, ¼ off to ⅜ up; May, 96¾-96⅞; oats, ⅜ decline to ¼ advance, and provisions, unchanged to a rise of 7 cents.

Corn traders took considerable notice of reports that arctic weather in Iowa had increased the feed requirements of live stock 50 to 100 per cent. An opposite factor, however, was talk that the forthcoming Washington official estimate of the number of animals on farms would show a material reduction and would imply feeding demand from now on would be much under normal.

Cotton Market

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Trading in cotton was quiet today and prices moved within a narrow range. The market closed steady, net unchanged to 3 points higher.

In the early trading January worked down from 12.48 to 12.42 and October from 12.51 to 12.44, making net losses of 2 to 4 points, but there was sufficient demand from the trade or covering to steady the market and closing quotations showed rallies of 4 to 7 points from the lowest.

Cable advices said one of the prominent international houses now estimates the Indian crop at 5,111,000 bales, against its estimate of 5,693,000 last year.

Exports today 16,812, making 2,882,071 so far this season. Port receipts, 8,645. U. S. port stocks, 2,918,000.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil closed steady today unchanged to 2 points net lower on sales of 34 contracts. Firmness in crude oil with rumors of a higher market at Southern points brought about steadiness during the first part of the day and a somewhat higher price range, but this was lost later under selling by houses with Wall street connections.

Bankers Keenly Interested in Government's Program of Paying Lower Rates on Loans; Large Potential Federal Offerings Seen Discouraging Other Financing.

New York, Jan. 24.—Bankers who have studied carefully the annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury are keenly interested in the view there clearly implied that the trend of interest rates, especially on Government obligations, will continue sharply downward for the next few years. This is reflected in the detailed estimates given of expenditures for the fiscal years ended June 30, 1934, 1935 and 1936.

The President's annual budget message and the annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury estimate increases in the public debt of $4,515,000,000 for the current fiscal year, $4,033,000,000 in the 1935 fiscal year and $3,152,000,000 in the year ended June 30, 1936. In other words, successive increases in the total interest-bearing debt of the Federal Government of 20 per cent this year, 15 per cent in the next fiscal year and 10 per cent in the 1936 fiscal period are anticipated.

On the other hand, estimates of interest payments on the public debt show no corresponding rise. For the current fiscal year, interest outlays are estimated to be only 10 per cent higher than for the preceding annual period, despite the fact that the principal amount of the Federal debt is being increased by 20 per cent. Next year a further rise of 10 per cent is expected also, while in the fiscal period ending 1936 the increase in interest outlay is estimated at less than 5 per cent.

Rise in Public Debt and Cut in Annual Interest Charge.

In other words, during the three fiscal years ended June 30, 1936, the rise in the public debt is expected to aggregate more than 50 per cent. The increase in annual Treasury interest charges, on the other hand, is held likely to be only half as great, or a little more than 25 per cent. This discrepancy results from the lower average rate of interest which the Federal Government expects to pay upon its obligations in the future, both through refunding old issues into lower-coupon bonds and through raising new funds at very low rates.

The ability of the Treasury to issue lower-coupon obligations has been amply demonstrated by its recent experience. The Secretary of the Treasury reported that on June 30, 1933, the computed annual rate of interest payable on all outstanding interest-bearing debt averaged 3.35 per cent. By June 30, 1934, the average rate had dropped to 3.18 per cent.

On the basis of the estimates of interest payments contained in the annual report of the Secretary, the Administration apparently expects that the average rate of interest it pays on its outstanding obligations will have fallen by the end of the current fiscal year to 2.88 per cent, and by June 30, 1936, to 2.65 per cent.

Such a lowering of the average rate of interest can be brought about by placing a larger portion of the Federal debt in the form of shorter term, rather than long-term issues, in view of the fact that monetary and other uncertainties have caused investors to prefer strongly obligations with nearby maturities. Currently, while the long-term obligations of the Government yield a little less than 3 per cent, nearby maturities give as small a return as one-tenth of 1 per cent and less.

However, the decline in the average interest date it will have to pay, expected by the Treasury, is so great as to indicate a belief that long-term governments will be saleable with a coupon rate of less than 3 per cent during the next two years or so. Federal obligations of long-term maturity with so low a yield have not been sold since the period preceding the outbreak of the European war. However, with 3 per cent long-term obligations currently selling at a premium of more than 2 per cent, such a consummation is far from unthinkable.

U. S. Bond Prices and Interest Rate Drop Present Anomaly

On the surface, the spectacle of rising Government bond prices and falling interest rates at a time when the Treasury has so large a deficit and the national debt is rising so rapidly is something of an anomaly. It reflects, chiefly of course, the vast excess reserves of the banks, which create a potential buying power so large as to far exceed the supply of new bonds that the Treasury is likely to offer for years to come. A secondary influence has been the very small volume of other types of investments that is being issued. Recent simplification of the registration statement for new issues by the Securities and Exchange Commission may modify this situation to a moderate extent, but there is as yet little reason to believe, with the present state of business and the known attitude of investors, that a flood of non-Government financing will soon appear to raise the cost of borrowing to the Treasury.

In fact, the large potential new Treasury issues in themselves tend to discourage other types of new financing to a considerable extent. Borrowers know they must compete with the Government in seeking new funds from investors. Investors know that they will have opportunity to buy freely of new Government issues, and so feel less eager to seek out other types of high-grade investments.

This lowering of the interest rate for the time being offsets in substantial measure the burden imposed on the budget by a rapidly rising Federal debt. In so far as the desire for lower interest cost makes the Treasury seek continuous easy money conditions, however, this policy may have unfortunate effects.

Bond Market Changes Little As Sales Drop

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Power company loans found friends in today's bond market, but elsewhere the list developed mild irregularity and trading was rather quiet.

Transfers totaled $11,780,000 par value, compared with $14,528,000 yesterday. Federal issues accounted for some $4,990,000 of the aggregate.

The Associated Press average for 20 utilities advanced .59 of a point, while the composites for the rails and industrials were slightly lower.

Power Issues Active.

Renewed interest in power issues was attributed partly to expectations that the Administration will be more lenient toward operating corporations and that rate difficulties confronting the majority of these concerns have been pretty well discounted lately.

Gainers of around 1 to 2 points or so in the utility department included Columbia Gas 5s of 1961 at 79½, American Water Works 6s at 78, Laclede Gas 5½s of 1960 at 69, Metropolitan Edison 4½s at 98¾, Milwaukee Electric 5s of 1961 and 1971 at 89½ and 89, New Orleans Public Service 5s at 66¾, North American Edison 5½s and 5s at 84⅜ and 79⅝, Portland General Electric 5s and 4½s at 99¾ and 59¼, Utah Light 5s at 75⅜, and Utah Power 5s at 79.

Industrials Firm.

Among scattered industrial firm spots were Gould Coupling 6s at 26⅞, Kelly-Springfield 6s at 51½, Marion Steam Shovel 6s at 64, and Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron 6s at 52.

White Sewing Machine 6s were up 9 points at 75 on a small turnover. Most of the losers were in the railway division, and these were only off fractionally.

U. S. Government securities were inclined to ease after a number had recorded new highs in early dealings. Advances of 2-32ds to 3-32ds of a point were held by Liberty Fourth 4¼s, Treasury 4¼s and Home Owners Loans 2¾s. Losses of 1-32d to 9-32ds of a point predominated, however.

Foreign obligations were quiet and a trifle mixed. Some improvement was shown by the Germans, but Copenhagen loans were heavy.

Steel Plants Plan To Spend $125,000,000

Mills Budget Huge Sum For New Equipment In 1935.

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—More than $125,000,000 has been budgeted by the steel industry for new equipment and plant modernization during 1935, according to an informal survey just completed by the American Iron and Steel Institute.

New equipment will consist largely of facilities for producing the lighter types of finished steel products. Under the NRA code there can be no expansion of present facilities for open hearth or Bessemer steel production.

Efficient and up-to-date capacity for rolling sheet and strip steel will be materially greater when the new mills under construction or projected are completed. Demand for these products has been steadily increasing in recent years, due largely to increased consumption by the automobile, container and other consumer goods industries.

Another survey recently completed by the institute indicates that the geographic center of ingot capacity in the United States is in Crawford County, Ohio, north and west of the town of Crestline.

Since 1874, the earliest year for which the institute found records, the center of the steel industry has moved steadily West, moving in the past 20 years along a nearly straight line across Ohio.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading on the stock exchange today was quiet and business consisted principally of the settlement of week-end accounts. Fresh support improved Kaffirs, home rails and oils but gilt-edged securities reacted due to competition from new issues. Japanese and Chinese bonds were weak owing to the fighting in Manchukuo. Transatlantic shares were uncertain and the market closed irregularly.

Paris—Strength in Royal Dutch and gold mining shares featured an otherwise hesitant session on the bourse today. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—Selling on the boerse today weakened prices but some improvement developed later and the closing was quiet.

Bank of England.

London, Jan. 24 (AP).—The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes in pounds: Total reserve increased 4,335,000; circulation, decreased 4,283,000; bullion, increased, 51,000; other securities, increased 470,000; public deposits, increased, 2,806,000; other deposits, decreased, 266,000; notes reserve, increased, 4,283,000; government securities, decreased, 2,235,000.

The proportion of the bank's reserve to liability is 49 per cent, compared with 47.06 last week.

Rate of discount, 2 per cent.

Freight Car Building Put at $50,000,000

By Richard R. Tryon.

Cleveland, Jan. 24 .—In sharp contrast to the fanfare marking the development of stream-lined trains a construction program 40 times as large is being quietly planned by America's railroads.

Freight cars instead of passenger equipment are involved in this project, and $550,000,000 is the estimated cost.

It's not merely a "talked-about" project, this freight car program; it is a matter rapidly becoming an actual necessity, railroad men say.

Replacement Long Delayed.

The situation arises, the railroad men assert, from the fact that for several years the carriers have not been building half enough cars to replace those worn out. In normal times the replacement requirements are about 80,000 cars a year.

About 25,000 new cars costing between $2,000 and $3,000 each, already are contemplated for 1935 construction, but officials of the carriers privately admit an additional 175,000 are going to be needed in the close-at-hand future, possibly before the year is out.

And if the railroads' freight traffic gets back to "full normal," they say, it will be necessary to build additional blocks of 200,000 cars annually for three or four years, instead of the 80,000 normally required.

Normally the railroads keep approximately 2,000,000 cars in active service, but because a fewer number were needed in the depression and because of a desire to defer capital expenditures then, the number of cars worn out or needing major repairs, now on side-tracks, is the greatest in history.

In anticipating that 200,000 new cars must soon be built, the railroad officials are not compelled to base their plans on the possibility of further increases from the depression's low traffic volume. Only a reversal of the present upward trend, they say, would be sufficient to reduce the size of the program.

The expected need of additional blocks of 200,000 cars annually for three or four succeeding years, however, is dependent on the belief that the traffic volume is headed back toward prosperity's levels.

In this connection, the equipment departments point out that 1934's freight volume was greater than either 1933 or 1932. Total loadings in 1934 amounted to 30,785,494 cars, an increase of 5.4 per cent over 1933, and 9.2 per cent over 1932.

Daily Credit of Reserve Banks Averages $4,000,000 Higher

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended January 23, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,468,000,000, an increase of $4,000,000, compared with the preceding week, and a decrease of $180,000,000, compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

On January 23 total reserve bank credit amounted to $2,463,000,000, a decrease of $5,000,000 for the week. This decrease corresponds with decreases of $35,000,000 in money in circulation, $25,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $28,000,000 in non-member deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, and an increase of $35,000,000 in monetary gold stock, offset in part by an increase of $113,000,000 in member bank reserve balances, and a decrease of $4,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency.

Holdings of bills discounted declined $9,000,000 at the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago and $8,000,000 at all Federal Reserve banks. There was practically no change in holdings of bills bought in open market and of United States Government bonds, while holdings of industrial advances increased $1,000,000. An increase of $2,000,000 in Treasury bills was offset by a decrease of $2,000,000 in United States Treasury notes.

Changes in the amount of reserve bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended January 23, 1935, were as follows:

Stocks Yield Fractions in Slow Trading

Price changes in equities were narrow, but small losses predominated. In bonds, the Government list, after making some new highs in early dealings, ended with small losses, while corporate issues were mixed. Power company loans, however, improved.

A few utility preferreds were able to get up from 1 to 2 points each or a little more, including Commonwealth & Southern at 3¼ and United Corporation at 28. Brooklyn Union Gas lifted over a point at 50⅛, but most other utility equities were unchanged to a shade easier.

Northwestern Shares Decline.

Declaration of a $2,500,000 dividend out of surplus by the Northwestern Improvement Co., of which the Northern Pacific Railroad was the recipient as the sole stockholder, was followed by a fractional setback in the latter's stock to 17⅝.

The payment, which has been made in varying amounts for several years past, was only about half the amount contributed to the parent company by this subsidiary at the end of 1933.

Burroughs Adding Machine, a mere fraction higher at 15, was apparently disposed to ignore increase in the quarterly dividend to 15 cents from 10 cents previously paid.

Dollar Gains Abroad.

Leading foreign currencies continued to slip off against the dollar despite arrangements made to ship a further $5,000,000 of gold to New York on top of Wenesday's engagement of $30,00,000 of imports. All leading gold currencies dropped moderately below their import points and the pound sterling likewise was soft.

Turnover on the stock exchange was 437,200 shares, and the Associated Press average for 60 selected stocks lost .17 of a point at 39.15. The usual favorites sagged minor fractions for the most part, including American Smelting at 35¼, Santa Fe at 48⅛, Bethlehem Steel at 31, Chrysler at 37¼, General Motors at 31⅝, Montgomery Ward at 28½ and Union Carbide at 45⅝. Among a few extending their declines to more than a point were American Telephone at 104⅜, Western Union at 31¾ and Monsanto Chemical at 58.

Wool Market.

Boston, Jan. 24 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—Trade was very spotty in the Boston wool market. Some houses had a steady call for moderate quantities of certain types of wool, while others were not even getting inquiries. Fine Ohio delaine or strictly combing 64s and finer Ohio fleece wools were sold at 27@28 cents in the grease, and strictly combing 56s, ¾-blood, moved at 26@28½ cents. The 64s and finer wools continued to have the bulk of the call in territory lines.

Curb's Prices Turn Mixed in Light Sales

Specialties Lead Changes; Sales Cut to 95,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—The curb market continued mildly irregular today as the volume of trading contracted further. Principal price variations were confined to specialty issues. Oils were easier.

Declines of around a point appeared in Creole Petroleum, Lerner Stores, Midvale and Standard Oil of Kentucky. Montgomery Ward "A" advanced nearly 3 in a light turnover, while Pepperell Manufacturing and Pratt & Lambert were up a point each.

International Petroleum and Lake Shore were small fractions lower. Quotations ruled about unchanged to a trifle improved in American Gas & Electric, Swift International, Electric Bond & Share, Distillers & Corporation - Seagrams and Pan American Airways.
